Germans May Seize French North Africa, Paris Press Declares

Nazi-Controlled Paper Warns Petain Government Against Flirting With United States.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
VICHY, Unoccupied France, Jan. 6.—German troops may seize French North Africa unless Marshal Petain's government quits its alleged flirting with the United States and swings closer to the Reich, the Nazi-controlled Paris newspaper Nouveaux Temps said tonight.

North Georgia Filter Center Being Set Up

Nerve Center in Atlanta Will Trace Movements of Airplanes.

A filter center to serve all of north Georgia in keeping precise track of invading airplanes is being set up in Atlanta, the Third Air Force headquarters in Tampa revealed yesterday.

An ingenious and complicated system which registers the force, direction, height and type of invaders, the center will require services of highly trained personnel, for whom 250 women volunteers now are being sought. Training will be started within 10 days.

All observation posts in the area telephone information of the flight to the center, which is equipped with a large table shaped like the area served. By means of arrows and small blocks the progress of the planes is traced. Silence is rigidly maintained by the women.

Experts View Chart.
Sitting in a balcony above this are Army, Navy and CAA representatives familiar with the whereabouts of defending aircraft.

From the filter center the assembled facts are flashed to an information center, not necessarily located in the same city. The information center dispatches immediate warning to the chief air-raid wardens in endangered cities and conveys necessary information to air-fighter headquarters.

The filter center is being completed in a secret location under the direction of Lieutenant James L. Whitcomb, signal officer, and telephone engineers. It was announced that women assigned to duty there would be instructed not to reveal to members of their families the location or nature of their work.

Mrs. Green Warren and Mrs. Robert Adamson are obtaining personnel. Elsewhere on the defense front yesterday, it was announced by T. C. Forbes, state rationing officer, that satisfactory progress was being made in setting up county tire rationing committees.

Operation Soon.
In Fulton county it was believed that operations would be under way by Friday. Applications and certificates were available yesterday to the county committee headed by Jack Rutland and were to be distributed to district committees probably today.

Colonel A. T. Colley, of Washington, Ga., resigned as executive director of the State Defense Committee because of ill health, and was succeeded by Colonel Charles E. Patterson, of Griffin, likewise, a retired Army officer.

The committee announced plans to enroll 575,000 white and Negro civilian defense workers, with state-wide registration starting January 23. Registration cards for each county will equal one-eighth of its population.

Rules Distributed.
Boy Scouts yesterday began distributing in the downtown area printed rules governing conduct during blackouts.

Added impetus to sale of defense bonds and stamps was declared a grave necessity at a meeting of the county defense committee. School Superintendents Willis A. Sutton and Jere A. Wells said children were being given air-raid drills and instructions for safety at home.

Reds Slaughter 10,000 Nazis in Five-Day Drive

572 Towns Retaken in Western Front Counterattack.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
MOSCOW, Wednesday, Jan. 7.—The Russians declared officially today that 10,000 Germans had been killed and 572 towns retaken on the western front in five days in a continuing counter-offensive.

The figures were given for the period between January 1 and January 5.

Two enemy transports and one troop transport also were announced sunk by Soviet units operating in the Barents sea in the Arctic.

These announcements came as a smashing Soviet offensive—the broadest in scope yet reported—bent forward at both the northern and southern extremes of the vast Russian battlefield while a wide sweep of encirclement developed at the center below Moscow.

This was the position as given in official Soviet accounts: Extreme south—the Kerch peninsula in the Crimea, was now wholly cut off by Russian troops which turned northward from Feodosiya on the peninsula's Black sea coast and drew a line which reached the Sea of Azov on the peninsula's northern coast.

Activity in Crimea.
Detachments from the besieged Soviet naval base at Sevastopol simultaneously burst out from the series of German outposts and fortifications and, in co-operation with the Soviet Black sea fleet, put under heavy assault German columns seeking to withdraw from the area to go to the aid of the imperiled Nazi forces on Kerch.

The Black sea fleet was in strong continued action and appeared to be in full control of all waters directly associated with land operations.

The Soviet drive continued after the Germans had been routed at Tim, some 40 miles to the east of Kursk, the latter a strategic point on the Moscow-Kharkov railway 280 miles below the capital. In the Kursk area, 15 miles of bleak road was littered with the bodies of the Nazi dead.

(The British radio reported the Russians also had crossed the upper Donets river. This crossing perhaps was in the region of Kharkov, in the upper Ukraine.)

Reds Are Advancing.
The new success beyond Tim again extended the width of a vast thrust apparently converging on the Rzhev-Mozhaisk-Bryansk-Smolensk quadrangle with Vyazma at its center.

Russian forces in this vast sector were still advancing, said military dispatches, although the Nazis were getting reinforcements and were attempting a series of delaying counterattacks.

The north—300 square miles of Soviet territory had been reoccupied on the Leningrad front, along with 30 towns and settlements, and in the past few days "thousands

OUR PRESIDENT SPEAKS.—"We must face the fact of a hard war, a long war, a bloody war, a costly war." So spoke President Roosevelt yesterday in his message to the new session of congress, in which he declared the United States' war effort in the coming fiscal year will cost 56 billion dollars, more than half the national income.

Indictment Charges Governor Buys Plantation of 2,464 Acres

Claims 'Talmadge and His Inner Circle Gang' Responsible for Grand Jury Findings.

By LUKE GREENE.
Charging that "Talmadge and his inner circle gang" were responsible for indictments returned against him by the Fulton county grand jury, former Governor E. D. Rivers yesterday categorically denied the accusations contained in those indictments and promised to meet Talmadge "in the court-house, on the stump or anywhere else" in order to "clear my name and that of my family."

As he talked the former Governor at times crouched tigerlike on the edge of his chair. At other times he leaned far back in a relaxed position only to spring forward at the next instant with another revelation. During the whole interview he smoked cigars incessantly.

Says Records Lacking.
In discussing the indictments, he charged that the Fulton county grand jury had an opportunity to scan only part of the records, because, he said, some of them were purposely withheld.

"Some of the things the grand jury questioned would have been cleared up if it had seen all the records," he asserted.

He added that not only had state funds been used for the investigation of his administration but that thousands of dollars in addition had been raised by private subscription from Talmadge leaders.

By these statements he made it clear he did not mean to cast any reflection on members of the grand jury. He explained that many "innocent and fine people" had been

Immense Production Program Outlined In Address to Congress

Plan Calls for 60,000 Planes This Year, 125,000 in 1943, and 120,000 Tanks.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A breathtakingly mammoth arms production, American forces fighting on many fronts, and an eventual hard-hitting attack upon the enemy's own territory, were woven into a unified war plan by President Roosevelt today and presented to an enthusiastically receptive congress.

All this, the President told a joint session of the national legislature, must lead inevitably to "total victory"—the "militarists of Berlin and Tokyo started this war," but "the massed, angered forces of common humanity will finish it."

There were gasps and whistles of amazement from some members of congress as he outlined the arms production program:

This year, 60,000 planes; next year, 125,000.

This year, 45,000 tanks; next year, 75,000.

This year, 20,000 antiaircraft guns; next year, 35,000.

This year, 8,000,000 tons of shipping; next year, 10,000,000.

Remembers Pearl Harbor.
"These figures," said the President, "and similar figures for a multitude of other implements of war, will give the Japanese and Nazis a little idea of just what they accomplished in the attack at Pearl Harbor."

And as a thunderous outburst of applause subsided, he departed from his prepared text to ad lib: "And I rather hope all these figures I have given will become common knowledge in Germany and Japan."

The President indicated the size of the war program had been increased since he talked about it to reporters last Tuesday. At that time he said the aim was to spend in the fiscal year beginning next July about half the estimated national income of $100,000,000,000. Today he estimated the expenditures at $50,000,000,000, or considerably more than half.

Behind such a great productive effort, he said, was the purpose not of providing a "slightly superior supply of munitions" but a superiority so overwhelming that the Axis nations can never hope to catch up with us.

Promises An Invasion.
This great store of weapons is to supply not only the forces of the United States, but of all the nations with which it is allied, and he repeatedly emphasized that the United States is fighting on the "same side" with the British, the Russians, the Dutch, the Chinese and the "exiled governments of the invaded countries."

To "hit" the enemy and "hit him again wherever and whenever we can reach him," to "keep him far from our shores, for we intend to bring this battle to him on his own ground," it was necessary not only that these arms be produced, but that American expeditionary forces join in the battle wherever they can help.

Thus, he foresaw American forces soon in action at "many points in the Far East," on "all the oceans," taking "stations in the British Isles" and protecting this hemisphere and bases outside the hemisphere "which could be used for an attack on the Americas."

Congress took it all at one end.

Islanders Hold Own in Lonely Luzon Struggle

Jap Ship Loss in U. S. Raid on Davao Still Growing.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
The American Philippine Army appeared to be holding its own yesterday in its lonely struggle, and upon the distant Singapore approaches the British defenders opened a series of successful local offensives against an invader who had made considerable earlier progress.

With the one exception of Malaya—and this was qualified—there were no Allied setbacks of consequence.

Jap Losses Mount.
In addition it developed last night that attacks by American bombers reported earlier on Japanese fleet units off Davao in Mindanao, the southern Philippine island, had caused more damage than was at first believed.

Aside from three direct hits on a Japanese battleship and the sinking of a Japanese destroyer, said the War Department's night communiqué, it was probable that more than one destroyer actually was sunk and that there was extensive damage to other ships.

The Japanese fleet assaulted consisted of a battleship, five cruisers, six destroyers, 12 submarines and 12 transports.

Luzon Activity Wanes.
On Luzon, the War Department's communiqué of yesterday morning reported, the Japanese invader had lessened his activity against General MacArthur's line north of fallen Manila, but he still was applying pressure on all American outposts.

The fortress of Corregidor, at the general's back, still strongly defended itself against Japanese air assault. Fifty enemy planes bombarded the fortress on Monday, the department announced, and at least seven were hit by American anti-aircraft fire.

In previous action at least 15 invading planes had been shot down by Corregidor's batteries.

In Malaya the Japanese had seized Kuantan airport on the eastern side of the peninsula, about 190 miles above Singapore, and thus had placed themselves within less than an hour's flight from that great base.

Because of the almost impassable terrain, the Japanese had

Rabbi David Marx Recalls 46 Years Of Atlanta Service

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Rabbi David Marx sat in his spacious study in the rear of the handsome Temple on Peachtree street, shoved cigarettes and ash tray toward me, and said he was glad The Constitution had picked me to do a story about the congregation's 75th anniversary.

"Not that all you newspaper folk aren't fine—you've always been fine to me," he continued. "But you and I have known each other so long. And liked each other, I think."

That certainly went over from my side. Ever since I've been in Atlanta, Dr. Marx and I have been mixed up in endeavors for the public weal. Dr. Marx as a worker and I as a reporter. And there's no man in Atlanta for whom I have a more sincere affection.

"You want a story about next Friday's observance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Hebrew Benevolent Congregation," he said. "I have some printed material which I'm trying to bring up to date."

"Thanks," said my correspondent. "But what I want is a story about you."

In Atlanta Since 1895. Dr. Marx said I think nobody ever thinks of him as "Rabbi" though that's his official title—tossed the remains of his cigar into a wastebasket and muttered something under his breath.

If it had been anyone else I'd have caught it as "Oh, hell!" but Dr. Marx's deep voice is sometimes difficult to hear distinctly.

"Story of my life? I was born, went to school, came to Atlanta in 1895, the Exposition year. I've been here ever since. Nothing ever has happened to me that would make a story. And I don't like personal stuff in the papers about me."

I'd heard that a thousand times before. Big shots say it and then recite an autobiography. Army officers say it—and mean it—because they're scared of an officer higher up.

Dr. Marx said it—and meant it because he's always been that way. And he's not scared of anybody or anything between the heavens above or the hell below—if there is one. We didn't go into that.

So if some of this story about Rabbi David Marx, head of the Hebrew Benevolent Congregation of Atlanta, is inaccurate in spots it's because I'm writing about the man as I've known him.

Born in New Orleans. He was born in New Orleans. His grandparents on both sides were German—of the old Germany. He went to Cincinnati as a boy, went through high school and the University of Cincinnati. In his university years he also attended the Jewish Seminary—the university in the mornings, the seminary in the afternoons. The education of a rabbi demanded eight years. It's nine years now.

"There were few Jews in Atlanta before the War Between the States and not many more just afterward," said Dr. Marx. "There was no synagogue."

"But a Jew named Abraham Byron Tilley

Rosenfeld was marrying a Jewish girl in Atlanta and a rabbi was brought from elsewhere to perform the ceremony. He suggested that Atlanta—this was while it still was a town left wrecked by the war—should establish a congregation. The Hebrew Benevolent Society was already in existence—so they used it as a basis for the new congregation. The same folk were in both. Not many. It was officially founded January 1, 1867—75 years ago."

"Getting back to yourself—" I suggested. "Oh, yes," said Dr. Marx. "Years after that I married the daughter of the Rosenfelds, whose marriage had inspired to founding of this congregation. But you needn't mention that."

The Marxes have one son, David Jr., a lawyer in Atlanta. And a grandchild or so.

Talked About Others. But don't think Dr. Marx "de-livered" to talk. He talked for one hour and 55 minutes—about other people.

He switched from theology to Jewish history and the influence of environment upon various religions. Somebody once wrote that his idea of a university was a student on one end of a log and Mark Hopkins on the other.

I learned more from that talk with Dr. Marx than I had learned since I left school—if I could just remember it. But it was too much to retain.

"The man is a human encyclopedia, a philosopher, a phrasemaker, a great humorist. But never a pedant. Never caustic—and he has more tolerance for all creeds and all people than any other man I know."

His principal theme was the essential kindness of heart of most people. He admitted there are exceptions, but he didn't specify any bad folk.

"I came to this congregation as its rabbi 46 years ago," he said. "I was lucky. As a young man—of 23—I arrived just when the men who had made and were making Atlanta were still alive. They made a tremendous impression upon me. Let's recall a few—the giants with vision and a deep pride in their city."

"There were Charles Currier, Mr. Collier, the Howells, Major Livingston Mims, Colonel 'Bob' Lowry, Captain 'Jim' English—oh, there were many. Among the Jews, the Elsas family, the Regensteins—but I can't mention them all."

"I can never forget how good they were to me, how they made me feel welcome. You can't do that unless you feel that way. A welcome must come from the heart."

"Three-Cornered Story." Dr. Marx was especially touched by the friendship he has held for all the years with ministers of other faiths—Catholics and Protestants alike.

"Here's a queer little three-cornered story," he said. "In Cincinnati one of my best friends was an elderly woman, a Catholic. When I had been some time in Atlanta she wrote me that another friend of hers, an Episcopalian, had been called to St. Luke's church in Atlanta and suggested I pay him a call. I did. He was Dr. C. B. Wilmer. I was the first Atlanta member of the clergy to call on him."

Dr. Marx was especially touched by the friendship he has held for all the years with ministers of other faiths—Catholics and Protestants alike.

"There were few Jews in Atlanta before the War Between the States and not many more just afterward," said Dr. Marx. "There was no synagogue."

"But a Jew named Abraham Byron Tilley

BELOVED CITIZEN—Dr. David Marx, rabbi of the Temple, which will observe Friday its 75th anniversary. Dr. Marx has headed the congregation for 46 years.

Perhaps I hadn't waited for him to 'get settled.' 'Wilmer laughed. 'That's odd,' he said. 'A Catholic asking a Jew to welcome a Protestant.'"

Dr. Marx grew almost sentimental as he talked of the long and intimate friendship between him and Dr. Wilmer, who has retired and is living in Tampa.

"I had a letter from him yesterday," he said. "Among other things he asks me for my interpretation of certain passages in the Old Testament."

"We spent many hours together and we'd argue heatedly on certain points of theology. Of course, neither of us ever made a dent in the other's belief—and we never tried. And we never quarreled."

Dr. Wilmer was not the only minister of another faith with whom Dr. Marx found friendship and companionship. He has always been held in such high respect—as a minister and as a man—that he has been welcomed as one of them.

Member of Rotary. The new Temple on Peachtree street, dedicated in 1931, was not completed until months after the expected date. Meanwhile, the old Temple on South Pryor street had been sold to another church. The congregation was homeless—for 15 minutes, or the time it took for other churches to hear about it.

"In that interim," said Dr. Marx, "we held our Sabbath—Saturday—services in several churches of various denominations. We had offers of far more churches than we could possibly use. If any member of those churches ever expressed an objection to Jews worshipping in their edifices I never heard of it."

David Marx is a Rotarian. He is Jewish chaplain of the United States penitentiary—at a dollar a year to give him official standing. He has been the representative of the Jewish Atlantans in virtually all public movements for years—all the World War I campaigns and the Community Chest, and more than one can recall.

He has addressed congregations in churches of virtually every faith. He is devoted to Scotch Rite Masonry, in which he long has been a prominent figure.

I have heard Dr. Marx often. He is a great orator, though you do not realize it until afterward. Because he is no impassioned spell-binder. He and Bishop Canine—and they were good friends—are the two most erudite men I have known. But he is never oppressive with his erudition. I have felt in awe of many men who wouldn't measure up to the knees of either. But I have never felt in awe of Dr. David Marx. He's too friendly. On the other hand, though I've known him some 30 years, I'd never think of calling him "Dave."

Population Shifted. Atlanta's first Jewish services were held in private homes. After that, in rented halls. The first synagogue was erected at Forsyth and Garnett streets, with 50 members. The religion is described as "mildly orthodox." The second was the handsome temple at South Pryor and Richardson streets, now the home of another denomination. It was consecrated in 1902.

The Jewish population shifted, as did that of other churches, to the northern sections of the city. So the handsome new temple, on Peachtree street, at Spring, was built. It was dedicated in 1931.

"There were elaborate services," said Dr. Marx, "with ministers of many creeds taking part. The ceremonies Friday will be simple. Because this is wartime."

"I have been rabbi here for 46 years. There are now about 10 members alive of my first congregation. Of that original congregation of 1867 not one is alive today—but their children and grandchildren are with us."

Farmers' Market Planned in Tifton

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder said yesterday a new state farmers' market would be built soon at Tifton.

The state has agreed to purchase about five acres of land, he said, and city and county officials will construct the market, which will consist of two sheds 46 by 72 feet.

Linder said the state would pay $10,000 for the market site which is on the Tifton-Moultrie road near the intersection with the Omega road.

J. F. Varner, of Tifton, who conferred with Linder yesterday about the project, said materials for the market would cost $2,000 and that construction would be undertaken with convict labor.

The market will be the seventh state farmers market in Georgia.

Co-operative New Addition To Girls' Home To Be Opened

Agriculture Secretary to Discuss Marketing in Light of War.

Claude R. Wickard, United States secretary of agriculture, will be the principal speaker Saturday night at the dinner of the Southeastern Co-operative League, it was announced yesterday by Jack Wooten, of the extension service of the University of Georgia. He will discuss co-operative marketing in the light of war-time activities.

Numerous co-operative organizations in the southeast, organizations principally devoted to co-operative marketing of farm crops, will be represented Friday and Saturday at the Biltmore, Edward Yeomans Jr., secretary of the Southeastern Co-operative League, announced. The league will hold its second annual convention on those days.

"War times have presented new problems for producers and consumers," said Yeomans, whose headquarters are at Carrollton, where the league was founded 18 months ago. "Both are being called upon to make sacrifices. They must make necessary adjustments, and all these matters must be threshed out."

"The numerous co-operative organizations must do everything they can to work with the government," Yeomans said. "They must avail themselves of government services—and they must do for themselves many things for which the people in the past have depended upon the government."

The sessions of Friday and Saturday will be addressed by representatives of several government agencies who will point out how producers of farm products best can serve.

East Point Citizens To Hear Peyton

Brigadier General E. G. Peyton, commander of Atlanta Civilian Defense, will address East Point citizens at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the city auditorium, Mayor Glenn Laney announced.

Mayor Laney announced he had appointed City Superintendent George Sparks, Police Chief W. H. Tyler and Fire Chief Max Wiggins as a civilian defense committee to handle organization of a citizens fire fighting and police organization. Registration of East Point women for defense is being handled at the office of the mayor in the city hall.

Defense Training In Radio to Begin

Registration for defense training classes in radio service and construction and aviation rigging and fabrication will be started at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Tech High school. Each class will number 20, and will be restricted to persons employed in these or allied trades.

Each class will be operated from 6:30 o'clock to 9:30 o'clock at night, Mondays through Thursdays. Instructors will be Charles H. Kreuger and William J. Ward.

It was announced that 5,900 persons had received defense vocational training, and that the size of the program will be trebled.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—(AP)—The Treasury advanced $20,000,000 more to the Russian government today for Russian gold to be delivered by January 3.

The Russians promised to deliver the gold within 180 days of January 3.

Previously, the Treasury has advanced $40,000,000 for Russian gold, of which $30,000,000 worth already has been delivered.

The Russians will use the money to buy war supplies in this country in addition to whatever materials they are getting under the lend-lease act.

Cocker Spaniel Puppies Need Foster Mother

Two little cocker spaniel puppies, born on New Year's Day, are in bad need of a foster mother. The pups came into the world as the result of a Caesarian operation, in which the mother died, and their owner, Mrs. Milton W. Thompson, of 350 Cheshire Bridge road, telephoned The Constitution yesterday to ask help in her hunt for the puppies.

"I'll lose the puppies if I don't find a foster mother," said Mrs. Thompson, whose telephone number is Hemlock 7007.

City Legal Department Shows $11,662 Surplus

The city of Atlanta legal department turned $11,662 of its appropriation back into the treasury at the end of 1941, Jack C. Savage, city attorney, reported to the mayor and city council in his annual report.

The department had a record year in the number of cases won and the cost of suits against the city, despite the saving effected. Savage said the new city code now in preparation will be ready about April of this year.

Did "Diamond Jim" Have Stomach or Ulcer Pains?

It is hardly likely that Diamond Jim Brady could have eaten so voraciously if he suffered after-eating pains. Sufferers who have to pay the penalty of stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas, heartburn, burning sensation, bloated and other conditions caused by excess acid should try a 25c box of Udo's Tablets. They will be money refunded. At drug stores everywhere.—(adv.)

Bootleg Liquor Fatal to Nine In Tennessee

Eight Others in Critical Condition From Wood Alcohol Content.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Chief of Police John F. Griffin said tonight that nine persons were dead and eight others were in critical condition from drinking poisonous bootleg liquor.

Five of the victims, all Negroes, died today. Chief Griffin said a state chemist's analysis disclosed the fluid contained 99 1-2 per cent wood alcohol.

"A half pint of the stuff is enough to kill a person," Griffin added. "We warned several persons who bought the alcohol in time to prevent them from drinking it."

Hospital attaches said blindness preceded the deaths in nearly all cases, a further indication, Griffin declared, that the drink was almost entirely alcohol, possibly the anti-freeze type used in automobiles.

Chief Griffin said a blind white man had been arrested in connection with dispensary of the fluid and had admitted selling five gallons of it.

WGST Hearing Delays January Regent Session

Meeting Scheduled for Monday Postponed Two Weeks.

The first meeting of the state regents since their midnight session at the Atlanta airport November 15 with pajama-clad L. W. (Chip) Robert Jr., will be held here January 26.

The board was scheduled to hold its January session January 12, but the regents' office announced the postponement because of the Federal Communication Commission hearing in Washington on Georgia Tech's application for renewal of its license for operation of its radio station, WGST.

The hearing, which started last month, will be resumed today. Involved in the application is the regents' negotiation of a contract for operation of the station by Arthur Lucas and William Jenkins, Atlanta theater operators.

This contract has the support of Governor Eugene Talmadge, but the present lessees, Southern Broadcasting Stations, Inc., have filed an intervening petition on the grounds that their contract runs until January, 1930.

Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the State Board of Regents; Chancellor S. V. Sanford; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, and members of the regents' radio committee, R. D. Harvey, of Rome; Robert, of Atlanta, and W. S. Morris, of Augusta, left for Washington yesterday afternoon.

L. R. Siebert, secretary of the board, said the radio contract might be on the agenda of the regents' meeting. He said he knew of no other business at the present time.

Muckle Pardon Ordered Revoked

The conditional pardon granted George Muckle, convicted lottery operator, by former Governor Rivers in 1940 was ordered revoked yesterday by Judge Jesse M. Wood in Fulton criminal court.

In the revocation order, Judge Wood and Solicitor Bond Almand set out that Muckle was granted a conditional pardon from a 10-month lottery sentence but that Muckle is scheduled for trial in the court now on two charges of speeding, on January 2, 1942, and that two county policemen swore in court that Muckle had violated the speed laws of the city and state on October 2, 1941.

Judge Wood ordered Muckle to begin serving the 10-month lottery sentence immediately and Deputy Clerk Howard White said Muckle would be sent to the prison camp today. The judge, in his summation of the case, stated evidence that Muckle had violated the conditions of his pardon was conclusive.

RIVERS DENIES CHARGES—In his first press conference since he left the Governor's chair, former Governor E. D. Rivers yesterday flatly denied all charges brought against him by the Fulton county grand jury. He accused "Talmadge and his inner circle gang" of fostering the investigation and promised to fight.

Rivers Denies All Charges

led into "the campaign of vilification" in good faith.

After tracing the history of the attacks on him, the former Governor finally came pointedly to the indictments and made this statement:

"I have at no time as charged in the indictments, or otherwise, with the people charged in the indictments or anybody else, directly or indirectly, conspired to defraud the state or make the state pay or be a party to making the state pay a higher price for any article than it was possible to buy it anywhere else."

He emphasized this applied to any item purchased by any department.

Rivers added he never had sought to influence any department, employee or officer as to whom they should buy anything from and wound up with the statement that "the conspiracy charges are absolutely untrue insofar as I am concerned or have any knowledge or information."

Says Indictment Untrue.

"As to this so-called embezzlement indictment so adroitly drawn as not to give details, I can reply specifically that it is untrue and without foundation of fact," Rivers declared.

He charged that this indictment was purely for "cumulative purposes" and was intended "to build up the number of indictments to make up for the lack of facts to support any of the other indictments."

Again referring to the "Talmadge crowd," Rivers declared: "They wanted to get people to saying 'Surely there must be something the matter with that fellow—he's accused of so many things.'"

The former Governor pointed out he was perfectly willing to have an investigation made of his administration so long as it was in good faith and was not promoted by those who wished to wage a campaign of vilification.

Machinery Charge.

As to the machinery purchases, Rivers charged that just before Talmadge went out of office in 1936 Talmadge bought up approximately $500,000 worth of machinery—that "carload after carload" was standing on the side-tracks and Talmadge had to open up the Highway Department on Christmas Day to pay for it. This machinery, he said, was bought without competitive bids.

In fact, Rivers said he was the first Governor ever to require competitive bids to be taken on highway equipment.

He added that during his administration every piece of equipment was in use building roads all over the state, together with some rented machinery, and that when Talmadge came into office he virtually gave this equipment away in order to buy from "his henchmen."

Market Without Bids.

"Now, they find they can't get equipment and road-building is virtually at a standstill," he continued.

Rivers also pointed out that the state farmers' market was built by "Talmadge henchmen" in the shadow of the Fulton county courthouse without bids being taken.

He said he was informed that John Whitley used the very highway machinery that he (Rivers) had purchased to build this market.

He charged it was an "open secret" all over Georgia that some of the highway contractors who had been issued certificates of indebtedness had to see certain lawyers identified with the Talmadge administration before they could get their money.

Attacks Highway Debt.

"At least one party named in these indictments was approached and told that if he would employ a certain Talmadge lawyer he wouldn't be indicted," Rivers continued.

"They make a big bugaboo about me leaving the State Highway Department deep in debt. Yet when Talmadge turned it over to me he left me with about nine to 11 million dollars in debts. I didn't squawk about it because I had more constructive things to do. He left virtually every other department under the direct control of the Governor's office in debt—the agriculture, the military and the game and fish departments, to name a few.

"As to this highway equipment, I understand that when it was being sold off, at Talmadge's behest, at a downtown hotel called up a highway employee and told him to come over. When the employee arrived this henchman asked if a certain piece of equipment was not worth about $500. The employee told him he thought it was worth $5,000. When the employee reported for work the next Monday morning he was fired."

Miller Bell Case.

"Then there was the case of Miller Bell, who was kicked off the State Board of Regents. Talmadge admitted changing the records, which is a distinct violation of the law.

"The attorney general openly charged that records were taken from his office and was so positive they went out through the Governor's office he had additional locks placed on the door between them. It's certainly a violation of the law to take records from anybody's office."

"If we're going to have an investigation, why not investigate all? I haven't the funds to finance such an investigation and certainly I can't take the state's money for that purpose."

Says Cocking Framed.

Speaking of Talmadge's ouster of Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin Pittman, Rivers declared: "By force and intimidation they framed Cocking and Pittman, but they're not successfully going to frame me. I'm going to meet them toe to toe and fight it out with them wherever they stick their heads up."

Turning to the pardon racket which he said had caused so much criticism to be directed his way, Rivers said: "It is significant that in the four years Talmadge was in office his signature released more than twice as many prisoners as I released during my four years."

"In pardons and paroles I turned out about 1,915 while Talmadge turned loose approximately 4,483. The Talmadge crowd in the last legislature were sponsoring a pardon investigation until some one called their attention to the fact that Talmadge had turned out twice as many as I had, and they dropped it like a hot brick."

They cried it down with a voice they cried it down with a resolution and then passed a resolution for the courts to take it up so they could time it when they got ready."

Calls Whole Thing Political.

"The pardon racket has been whipped up for the purpose of distracting from the record I made as Governor."

For the past three years Rivers charged that the Talmadge faction had been hammering at the same things. He said they first tried to beat him on the issues of good government and when they found they could not do that they turned on him with personal attacks on him and his family.

"This very special effort in which they are now engaged comes on the eve of the political campaign of 1942 when Talmadge is under fire from every source both in and out of the state. This campaign is for the purpose of diverting public attention from Talmadge's misdeeds and attempting to put me back on the front pages."

"This whole thing was conceived in politics, born in politics and is being nurtured in politics."

Letter to Grand Jury.

Rivers declared that in the last few days "since the heat has been on" Talmadge had opened up headquarters in a second downtown hotel to press the grand jury charges.

"They keep going in and out of hotel rooms and maneuvering on the side as if they were engaged in a regular political campaign," the ex-Governor said.

Rivers spoke of the letter he wrote to the grand jury, the contents of which never were made public.

He said he wrote it in good faith only after he found that the investigation was "politically-tainted." In that letter he said he offered to go before the grand jury and answer any questions the jurors wished to have answered.

He explained he never received a reply. He would not elaborate

City's Budget For 1942 Set at $11,086,481

Total $688,096 Above Fund Available in January, 1941.

The city of Atlanta will have a total of $11,086,481.05 to spend during 1942.

This figure was certified yesterday by the budget commission of the city government and will be basis for spending by city council and the mayor.

"The total in the budget this year is exactly $688,096.95 more than was in the budget in January of 1941," Councilman John A. White, chairman of the finance committee and a member of the budget commission, declared.

1942 Budget Figure.

The amount fixed by the 1942 budget commission is $165,000 more than the sum set in December by the 1941 budget commission.

White said that the total was raised by increasing the anticipated receipts from the general tax on real estate.

The commission anticipated a total of $10,494,645.15 in receipts for 1942, and to this is added a cash carry-over of $591,835.90, to make the $11,086,481.05 to be budgeted against.

The finance committee is to meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon to begin consideration of appropriations. First, debt service and then cost of operations will be agreed upon.

"After that, what is left will go to salary increases," said White.

Labor Asks Raise.

Labor leaders are demanding a 15 per cent hike in all salaries, and an administration-backed proposal for a graduated series of raises is to be taken up by the finance committee today. This proposal is to give 10 per cent raises for those making $100 or less, 7 1-2 per cent hikes to those making between $100 and $150, and five per cent to those drawing from $150 to $200.

White and Councilman Howard Haise yesterday declared the new budget is greater than that of 1941 despite losses in revenue from intangible taxes and water sales totaling $241,000.

FARM AGENT CALLED.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ga., Jan. 6. (AP)—J. L. McCreary, Twicken county farm agent, has been ordered to report at Fort Benning for active duty. He was a member of the ROTC.

on his reaction to this because he said any statement might be interpreted as a reflection on the grand jury when he did not mean to cast any such reflection.

Matter Confidential.

What happened in the grand jury room when the letter was discussed came to him by "grapevine routes," he said. He added he could not talk about this, since it was confidential.

"So long as an investigation of my administration was being conducted by apparently non-partisan people and financed through the proper channels, I welcomed it," Rivers said.

Throughout the lengthy press conference Rivers' attorney, Judge Tom Miller, of Lakeland, sat quietly on the side. Rivers would not start the interview until Miller arrived.

At the outbreak the ex-Governor said he was of necessity concluding his long silence on political affairs. When he retired from public office, he said he thought that propriety demanded he not be continually in the spotlight. In the light of recent attacks, however, he said he no longer could remain silent.

To Seek Early Trial.

During the day Judge Miller called at the Fulton county courthouse and got Rivers' bond which will be made in Lanier county. Rivers, who will seek an early trial, said the people in his home county requested that they be allowed to go on his bond. It will be signed by the sheriff there and returned to Fulton where it will be signed by one of Rivers' friends to give it proper jurisdiction.

The bond of E. D. Rivers Jr., the former Governor's son, also will be made in Lanier county, it was said.

O. G. Glover, former state purchasing agent, who is charged with conspiracy, was in Rivers' hotel, and had this comment:

"There is no statement I have to make at this time, but I will make a statement in detail later. I have had many calls from my friends and I want to assure them through the press that I am not guilty of any misconduct in office. During my connection with the state I worked long hours and tried to do a good job and save the state of Georgia millions of dollars. Many of the messages I have received came from former pastors of my church and I greatly appreciate that."

John Greer Jr., one of Rivers' legislative leaders, said his bond had been sent to his home in Lakeland and added he had no comment to make on the indictments since he had not read them.

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY"

Without Painful Backache Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, cure their discomfort, that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Rivers, Talmadge in Same Hotel

It looked like the Hatfields and McCoy's in the Henry Grady hotel last night.

In the east wing of the fourteenth floor were ensconced former Governor E. D. Rivers and a number of his followers.

Directly opposite, in the west wing on the same floor, were Governor Talmadge and a considerable force of supporters. It was entirely possible for both camps, now badly at odds over the indictment of the ex-Governor and various officials after an investigation financed by Talmadge-supplied state funds, to glower at each other across some 50 feet of open space.

Both crowds necessarily used the same elevators and approaches. It was not known last night if the two principals had encountered each other.

Dr. Killinger Talks 363 Students Drop At Exchange Club From University

Dr. George G. Killinger, director of education at the Atlanta penitentiary, described the institution's tremendous educational and rehabilitation program to members of the Exchange Club at their weekly luncheon at the Piedmont hotel yesterday.

The Atlanta institution has been a pioneer in its program for rehabilitating convicts, Dr. Killinger said, leading in the movement to provide educational advantages for second offenders.

Dr. Killinger came to Atlanta several months ago from Chillicothe, Ohio, prison, where he served first as psychologist and then as educational director. He was introduced by Peter Liller, Exchange Club program chairman.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 6.—(AP)—The University of Georgia began its winter session today with 2,498 students, a drop of 363 from the number that started winter classes last year.

While a total of 2,871 students were registered for the start of winter classes last season, the number at the end of the term had increased to 3,255. The total for the fall quarter this year was 2,986.

T. W. Reed, registrar, said he could not estimate the number of students entering military service. Many others remained at home to take jobs created by the war effort.

Atlanta Begins Filing Income Tax Returns

March 16 Is Deadline; Twice as Many Now Must Report.

The Ides of March was the day that gave Julius Caesar trouble, but it's a point two days later that's preying on Atlantans' minds—March 16, Income Tax Day.

Attaches of the office of Marion H. Allen, internal revenue collector, know that at least a few Atlantans are cognizant of the deadline for filing income tax returns because they have started appearing on the second floor of the Old Post Office building in considerable numbers.

Thousands more will have to make their appearance before March 16, if they are to get in under the line. More than twice as many individuals are required to file income tax returns for 1941 than filed them for 1940. Any single person with an income of $750 a year and any married person with an income of $1,500 will be required to make a return. Last year the starting point was $800 for a single person and $2,000 for a married person.

Filing a return takes an average of 25 minutes, and those who come early will have the assistance of one of the 10 income tax specialists without waiting.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 7, 1942.

The President's Message

President Roosevelt on yesterday delivered his message "on the state of the union" to the newly assembled congress. It might, more correctly, have been denominated a message on "the state of the world."

Hearing and reading that message the people of the United States must take new heart, new courage for the tremendous tasks of war, and the coming peace, which face them. It was a clarion call from a strong man to a strong people, bidding them gird for conflict that must, perforce, be long and bitter but which shall, most certainly, lead to final victory and the gaining of all objectives.

One of the most important points of the speech was when the President declared: "This time we are determined not only to win the war, but also to maintain the security of the peace which will follow."

He touched there upon the tragic failure of the United States after the close of the first World War. When the United States senate, by less than a majority vote, refused to ratify the peace in which President Woodrow Wilson had so large a part in the making, when those same senators refused to join this country with the other free nations in the League of Nations, they wrote the course of history which has been the chief contributing factor to the rise of the Axis dictatorships.

We are pledged, today, not to repeat that old, fatal mistake.

"The militarists in Berlin and Tokyo started this war, but the massed armed forces of common humanity will finish it. . . . The superiority of the United States in munitions and ships must be overwhelming, so overwhelming that the Axis nations can never hope to catch up with it. . . . Let no man say it cannot be done. It must be done, and we have undertaken to do it. . . . American armed forces must be used at any place in all the world where it seems advisable to engage the forces of the enemy. . . . Our war program for the coming fiscal year will cost fifty-six billion dollars or, in other words, more than one-half the estimated annual national income. . . . In other words, it means an "all out" war by individual effort and family effort in a united country. . . ."

There are some of the highlights of the speech. They should be taken deeply and sincerely to heart by everyone of us. We must, if we would win, know, every moment of every minute of every day, this is our war, that it is up to us, individually, to fight until we win.

It will cost more than half our income. That means not only national income, but your income and that of your neighbor. Somehow, by bonds, by taxes, more than half your normal income must go into the national war chest, this year.

It will be the wise man who makes his plans for 1942 with the clear understanding of that basis for his budget and expenditures.

Not only does it cost plenty to be listed among the ten best dressed women in the United States but one must spend the rest of the year running for re-election.

—BUY DEFENSE BONDS—

Must Correlate Prices

Those who today are demanding that prices of agricultural products be divorced from all other prices under federal control are treading upon dangerous ground.

They seek to transfer farm price controls to the Department of Agriculture, divorcing it from the over-all price controls.

These—many in Georgia are among them—are courting favor with the farmer at a price which means eventual disaster for the farmer.

Because price controls, to be effective, must be correlated. If any element in the economy gets out of hand then other elements respond and a vicious spiral has been started which in the long run causes the first element to lose balance.

The farmer might gain a temporary advantage from abnormally high prices. Yet these high prices will in turn be reflected in higher industrial wages and prices. These affect the farmer when he in turn purchases and his temporary advantage is quickly lost.

Strong centralized control of prices is essential if living costs are not to get out of hand. The farmer must assume his share of the task ahead on the same basis with all other citizens, for his own protection as well as that of others.

When Quislings Tremble

Norway's Quisling, as an individual, has almost been forgotten by the outside world in the rush of later and more important events. But the word which will forever keep his name alive is not forgotten, it has become an accepted word of the language. A quisling, henceforth, is a traitor, for quisling is to betray your own country and your own people.

Today, a new meaning to the verb is rapidly coming into being. It is truer and truer each day that quisling is synonymous with fear-inspired shivering. There must be many quislings in Europe today who, alone in the silent hours of the night, cannot control their fear and spend the hours in hideous shivering as they foresee the doom ahead of them.

For, as indicated by dispatches from France, the abused peoples of the conquered countries are stirring and rising against their oppressors in ever-increasing numbers. The reason is not far to seek. When the United States entered the war against the Axis, it became plain to all with reasonable intelligence that the days of Nazi-Fascist power are numbered.

It is quite possible, under the censorship that exists throughout occupied Europe, many persons there did not know, promptly, this country was ranged among Hitler's active foes. But, as the news percolates, with all its meaning, the conquered peoples, the little peoples who have lived for so many months upon hope alone, take new courage to oppose their temporary masters.

Yves Paringaux, pro-Nazi cabinet officer of the Vichy government of unoccupied France, is found dead on railroad tracks, presumably victim of assassination.

A German-controlled Paris newspaper devotes half its front page to editorial mouthings against Marshal Petain, the old warrior who, as head of the Vichy government has done all a man could do for his people, while the German gun was held against his head.

Says that editorial, Petain, in his discussions with German officials about "greater collaboration," has been but "jolly" the Germans and is not in sympathy with collaboration with Hitler at all. This is probably true.

But, if the old marshal has taken greater courage to defy his country's foes, it can only be because of the entry of the United States into the war. Petain is a soldier of long experience, he knows what the outcome of the struggle must be, now the definite lineup is made.

Too, German forces are suffering near-disaster in Russia, and the Axis forces in Libya are near their final debacle.

Petaim may well look to Africa, see there the growing might of the already victorious Allies and realize that hope for saving the French African empire, as well as for restoring the France of Europe, lies not with Hitler, but with the foes of Hitler.

We do not know all taking place in occupied Europe today. The Nazi censorship prevents. But we know enough, from Norway and Serbia and France and other places, to know the peoples of the occupied nations have taken new hope since the entry of this country in the war against their enemies.

New hope for all of them, save the quislings, who tremble as the handwriting on the wall tells, ever clearer, the fate that awaits them when once their betrayed countrymen are in position to exact the vengeance that awaits all traitors.

Georgia Editors Say:

NO ROCKING THE BOAT.

(From The Augusta Chronicle).

What should be done with people who in time of peril insist upon rocking the boat and endangering the lives of all who are in it, including their own? asks The Charlotte Observer.

Those who are so selfish and so blind to their own safety and so indifferent toward the fate of their fellows deserve to be hurried overboard. The lives of all in the boat are worth more and are entitled to more consideration than the life of any one person or small minority group recklessly imperiling the lives of all.

In America today we all are in the same boat, and all face the same fate.

We save our country by winning the war together for all of us or we lose the war and all of us lose our freedom, our way of life, even our physical as well as our intellectual and spiritual lives.

No patience or tolerance should be shown any person or minority group that insists upon rocking the boat in the perilous waters through which we are trying to make our way to safety.

Those who sabotage defense plants now are rocking the boat; likewise those who deliberately stop or slow down the production of desperately needed ships, airplanes, tanks or munitions.

They are giving "aid and comfort" to the enemies of their country in wartime. If that is not treason, what is it? Read The Constitution.

BRITONS ON U. S. BOMBING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—After what happened at Pearl Harbor no one is willing to write off the possibility of any surprise war move on the part of the Nazis, but members of the British air mission accompanying Prime Minister Churchill to the United States have been rather scornful of the idea that Washington, New York and other American cities may be bombed by air raids from Europe.

The British, who have certainly had enough experience both ways to qualify as experts, insist that the nuisance value of such bombings would be too negligible to warrant the undertaking.

Because of the great distances involved, the Germans, at most, could never be expected to get through more than a handful of planes. Moreover, there could be little or no hope for any of them returning safely. Also, there would be no assurance of the bombers being able to find their objectives even if they succeeded in reaching this side of the Atlantic. The iron-clad censorship the government has clamped down on all weather information is extremely discouraging to any long-range expedition such as would be involved in a flight from Europe to the United States.

WEATHER IS PROTECTION So variable is the weather along our Atlantic seaboard, particularly at this time of the year, that a fleet of German bombers—if they have any with sufficient range—might start out under favorable conditions at Norway only to find the air closed in on them when they reached this side.

This does not eliminate the possibility of the Germans or the Japs slipping the airway cordon through the cordon of our Atlantic or Pacific coastal patrols. If we are to get any bombings, they are more likely to come from this source than through direct flights by land-based planes.

WE ARE MORE ALERT That is what happened at Pearl Harbor. But we were not on the alert then. Not being at war, we failed to anticipate the possibility of a carrier-based air attack. Now we are very much on the lookout. It is extremely doubtful that a carrier could catch us unprepared again as we were at Hawaii. Not everyone is by any means convinced yet that the early scares on the Pacific coast were justified. There has been a lack of convincing evidence that the fleet of planes reported off San Francisco were actually enemy craft. In hysteria and confusion following our sudden entry into a state of war, it is easy to see how an error might have been committed in identifying some of our own air patrols. If an error was committed it is natural to understand why the responsible Army or Navy divisional command was not anxious to admit it.

Aside from the unnecessary temporary excitement caused, it was probably a good thing to have the public aroused to a proper appreciation of the dangers involved. When and if bombings do come the people will be better prepared to protect themselves.

NO ONE REALLY KNOWS No one knows for sure that the Germans have bomber planes of sufficient range to make the Atlantic crossing and return. We do know, however, that, like ourselves, they have been experimenting in this field for several years—even antedating the outbreak of the war.

Actually, we already have a plane developed and flying that is capable of negotiating the distance from here to Berlin and home and return. With a range of some 10,000 miles, it could scatter several tons of bombs over the two Axis capitals and fly back to the United States without refueling. The huge bomber, still undergoing experimental flights in California, has been officially announced by the War Department, although regarded as one of our chief military secrets until first details leaked out at the time it was launched a few months ago.

True we have only one of the mammoth planes, so far as known, but the very fact of its existence beyond the blueprint stage is reason enough to assume the Germans may have something of the same proportions. It may well be they have a whole fleet of them already in operation for use against us—with more in the building. Our suspicions over this being the case were aroused some months ago by intelligence reports that a large segment of the German aircraft industry was undergoing retooling for new designs—probably long-distance bombers.

ATTACK LONG PLANNED The implications of the Pearl Harbor attack also point in this direction. There is now no doubt that the attack represented an act of collaboration with the Germans that was started more than a year ago. Plans for the surprise blow had been in the process of execution for at least 12 months.

If the Nazis have been preparing for our entry into the war that long, it is certainly logical to assume their plan has been extended to cover the probable use of transatlantic bombers.

Nevertheless, the British are inclined to poo-poo the idea. More realistic than we are, perhaps, from the greater war realism they have suffered so far, they say the practical results to be accomplished by a German air mission would not be enough to compensate for the damage expectancy.

Even if the Nazis succeeded in sending their bombers to some of our cities, the injury caused would be too small for any military purposes, unless, of course, the target happened to be an aviation plant or some important naval construction yard. To kill some of our people would only serve to intensify our war effort, they point out.

PREPARED, ANYWAY All of this may be true, but it can be said without revealing any military secrets the Washington government is viewing the possibilities on the side of precaution. Far-reaching steps have been taken to meet any surprise attack the Germans or the Japs may make upon us from the air—however venturesome or ambitious the undertaking might be.

What To Do With Saved Waste.

Responding to appeals by many authorities, including the federal government, a large proportion of citizens are now saving waste materials. For there is scarcely any form of waste that cannot, if put in the right place, be used for the production of war material.

It has been suggested, conservatively, that every home can save 50 pounds of waste paper a month. If that home takes two newspapers more than this should be gathered together monthly, if all paper, including containers, etc., is saved.

Waste paper is used in making the pasteboard containers for guns and ammunition, the containers that carry all sorts of equipment to our fighting forces, in training camp here or overseas.

Then there are old tin cans. These are valuable for the metal in them. There is even value in accumulations of tin foil, found in packages of cigarettes, gum, etc.

There are many people, however, who, having saved such waste, don't know what to do with it. The answer is the commercial dealers in old metal, tags, waste of all kinds. These are the people who will get the stuff most quickly to the factories where it is needed.

They will, too, pay you a little for the waste you carry to them. It is their business. They receive the market price from the people to whom they, in turn, sell. There is no other channel through which your accumulations may so quickly be made useful.

There are a number of concerns in Atlanta always ready to buy waste paper, old tin cans, tin foil, etc. Don't ask them, though, to come and get it at such a time as this. They are too busy. Wait until you have all the old family tin and then carry it all in one load.

Look in the classified section of the telephone directory under the heading, "Junk Dealers." Do a little phoning and find out who handles the particular form of waste you have saved. One firm may, for instance, buy waste paper, old newspapers, magazines, wrappings, etc., another tin cans and still a third tin foil. And another old metal.

Not Money

You Seek.

Of course, it is not the small amount of money this waste brings,

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Too Late To Argue

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The CIO and the Automobile Manufacturers' Association are wasting time, breath, ink and good white paper arguing a proposition that is no more soluble than how-high-is and equally bootless. What the hell difference does it make now whether maladministration in Washington, industrial inefficiency, economic caution or honest fear of a Socialistic coup in the motor industry or what combination of all these factors caused the enormous and irretrievable waste of materials and loss of time in conversion of the motor factories to war production? The grim fact is that the stuff and time did slip through our fingers and the lowdown, dirty truth is that we were caught just as Hitler figured we would be caught, divided on the issue of war and hardly even half willing to make a war effort until Japan made war official.

During much of that time we were almost wholly occupied with one of the weird quinquennial political crazies which enliven the life of this interesting republic and were scrapping over such questions as "Is Wilkie a phony Hoosier?" and "How did Harold Ickes strike it rich?"

War Trade Without Future Naturally, the motor companies were slow to abandon their regular trade and go into the war business, because war is a business without a future and they were thinking of a time when the war would be over, perhaps without our ever having entered the fight, and they would be left with a lot of expensive plants which would be useless for any other trade.

Moreover, it can't be forgotten surely that as recently as the first year of the New Deal the industrialists who had turned out the tools and soldier suits and canned goods for the last war were being denounced as bloody-handed monsters who had practically kicked up the whole ghastly business in cold premeditation so that they could get rich on the war orders.

And we have to remember that within the very same CIO, which is now making politics of this tragic bungle, and high in its councils, too, there were a number of men of Moscow who fought, by subtle means and open, to snarl our war program, then called the defense program, because Hitler and Stalin were partners and the war was then an imperialistic war, and no proper business of ours.

Caught In Jam No question about it, we were just caught in a jam, mostly of our own making, and Hitler, who always was the No. 1 enemy, had studied our habits and our condition and calculated the advantage which this gave him.

I was in Washington when the CIO presented the "practical, simple plan" for utilizing and adapting the available machinery in the automobile industry for plane production" which is mentioned in the current political advertisement of this suddenly patriotic organization. Possibly the magnates made a mistake in rejecting it as a Socialistic scheme intended to wrest the industry out of the hands of the owners who, incidentally, are legion, and of the builders and executives, and deliver it to the unionists forever.

The industry is sure to be Socialized now and God only knows who will get it when the war is over, but the odds are that it will never be turned back to the stockholders as private property, so maybe they might better have just relaxed then, and saved a year's time. But, as capitalists and believers in private property, their reaction was the only one that could have been expected of them.

No Reason For Trust They had no reason to trust the men who had fought the war, so short a time before or to accept the CIO's profession of patriotic motives, and, anyway, we weren't at war, millions of Americans thought we could escape war and the big operators quietly scanned the plan and brushed it off for reasons which they will defend as long as they live.

The situation now is that this enormous wad of American industrial muscle must be put to fighting purposes and, granted good will and good faith on both sides, will be. It is simply pathetic that such might, which Hitler and the Japs admire, envy and fear, isn't fighting today, but that great loss of effort and what-it-takes can't be retrieved and the CIO contributes nothing to unity and the great effort by wrangling now.

The most practical and courageous stroke in the whole sad mess was the sudden, brutal abolition of the passenger car trade and the sale of tires. That hurt, but in our geographical position, so far from the suffering and noise of war, the lash will be needed again and again before we quit making politics and wasting time in whodunnit debates and realize that this is a fight for life.

And always remember that old Scotch proverb: "Many a mickle makes a muckle."

Twenty-five Years Ago Today. From the news columns of Sunday, January 7, 1917:

"At a called meeting of the water commission held Saturday afternoon in the office of General Manager Zode Smith, the proposed increase in the water rate from its present figure to 60 cents minimum per month to double that amount was discussed."

And Fifty Years Ago. From the news columns of Thursday, January 7, 1892:

"Miss McEllan will reopen her dancing classes for young ladies and gentlemen."

"And bring a girl for Jim, and one for Dave—and a good book for Wilbur."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

BOMBERS OFF DAVAO Quite the best American news of the war arrived on the same day in the morning paper of yesterday:

1—American bombers were in action off the harbor of Davao on the lower island of the Philippines.

2—Corregidor's defenses still were on the job, shooting down Japanese planes.

The first item of news is important because it means our bombers have bases somewhere in the East Indies and that we have enough of them there to go on the offensive.

The distances are, unfortunately, such that fighter escorts are not probable. That will handicap our bombing efforts. Yet they are not as impossible as they are from Midway (if it still be held), and from the Aleutians, with their constant fog and bad weather.

When war came on December 7 we had a large number of ships at sea carrying bombers and planes to the Philippines. Many of them did not get there. The plan was to hold the Philippines with bombers and fighters and they likely would have been held but for the fact some were lost on the ground. At no time were we able to put enough planes in the air to protect the troops or prevent landings. The dive bombers could have done so.

The fact that we have bases, even though they may be as close as 300 miles away or as far as 600 or 700 miles away, is of great importance. As we manage to get more and more of them to the East Indies, and work in conjunction with the Dutch, the war may well be won, and not until then. That is why the news of bombing operations is such good news. We've got bases, not too good, but still bases. And we've got enough bombers over there to start action.

FORT CORREGIDOR It is very easy now to see how important are planes. We refused to listen to our own officers who believed in them when the first war was done. Later on we refused to listen to the President. We refused to heed the Navy's appeal to fortify Guam and other islands in the Pacific.

It was not until Germany showed that sea power, as we knew it, was obsolete, that we began to doubt. It required Pearl Harbor to change the most stubborn of those minds beneath the brass hats. They had to hear the example of the German panzer divisions before they changed their minds and gave our own pioneers in armored preparation the green light.

All our defense plans in the Philippines were made before the second World War in so far as any permanent defenses were concerned. The decision to stock the islands with bombers and fighters came late; so late not all of them were there when the attack came.

The idea was, for years, that a naval attack would be made on the Philippines with Hawaii subjected to a mass submarine attack on shipping sent the islands and on the naval vessels based there. Japan crossed up the plans with a sensational air attack on both points.

Fort Corregidor was built to withstand a sea attack. As such it is of tremendous value. As long as it holds out the Japanese are in trouble. It is part of the old plan but it is working rather well.

A GOOD, BIG ROCK Built to withstand an assault from the sea, Corregidor is now fighting off air attacks.

"Government may commandeer private cars."—News Item.

Dear Uncle Samuel: I hear you may decide to commandeer all private cars . . . the old and new . . .

If so I have great news for you! I have one I will gladly send to you in hopes it may defend our land and do its little part. That is, if you can make it start.

The wheels are slightly set askew. The motor has a case of flu. The armatures are all unstrung. The carburetor has one lung. The axle on the rear wheel plays. That's what the car repairman says.

No bursting shell or blasting curse. Can make the body look much worse.

The teeth are missing from the gears. And, like four cauliflower ears, the fenders hang with many dents. Received while pushing down a fence. Or dishing out a vicious slug. At some unyielding water-plug.

The fuel tank is big and strong. But gas won't stay there very long. Because the engine sucks it in. And quickly blows it out again. Again, the old repairman sings: "You oughta get a set of rings—The gas you put at such a cost. Goes out, unburned, through the exhaust."

Such are its faults . . . and, furthermore, You've closed my tire and rubber store.

And when my frugal soul desires A pair or two of rubber tires I find I cannot purchase them. Unless I see the O. P. M. And take an oath that I will try To make them last until I die. From my unselfish heart I say: "I'll gladly give the thing away. It won't behave and I can't make it. And if you want it come and take it."

From one angle, this is a democracy, not a dictatorship.

I think it was extremely bad taste—and worse Americanism—to "boo" a picture of the President, especially in times like these. But many of us "booed" Hoover—and I've heard a number of folk

"Information" Asks Your Help

"INFORMATION" service is maintained to furnish numbers that do not appear in the current telephone directory. This one appointed task keeps the Information girls busy. But, in addition to the numerous requests for unlisted numbers, they have recently been receiving a great many calls for numbers that are listed in the directory.

Telephone users can get numbers much more quickly by looking them up in the directory than by asking "Information" to do it. This large volume of unnecessary calls which the Information girls are really not supposed to handle, naturally hinders them in their regular work of supplying numbers not listed in the directory.

Always look in the directory first, to see if the person wanted is listed, before calling "Information." It will save time and help improve "Information" service.

LOUD SIRENS NEEDED FOR AIR RAID WARNING

Editor, Constitution: As a means for warning the city against air raids a very loud, piercing and shrill siren should be employed. It ought to commence softly, however, so as to not startle those who may be in close proximity to the alarm. Factory whistles and the usual type of siren or alarm are unsatisfactory since they are not only too familiar and thus will command less attention, but also they are not sufficiently loud. Take heed—do not rely upon these familiar devices!

NEGROES WON'T FAIL THEIR COUNTRY IN WAR

Editor, Constitution: Speaking for myself, and the loyal Negroes of America, of which 90 per cent of the race are loyal to their country, permit me to say, speaking for them, that the race in America has never failed their country in the time of peril and no slackers or traitors can be found among them now. The United States of America may have failed her Negro citizens, both in the time of war and peace, but the Negro never have and never will fail to give all he has for the honor of the American flag, and the protection of our homeland.

Our country may fail us, but we will never fail it. With the American Negro, country is first, right or wrong; and everything else is last. What little freedom the Negro has in the world, is in America, and he cannot hope to gain more, if he loses what he has in the homeland. With the Negro this is not only a war of self-defense, but one of preserving the ideals of free government for all the people everywhere, of which Negroes are part and parcel.

We appeal to every Negro in Georgia in particular, and every Negro in America in general, to do his bit in this hour of national and international peril to win this war of conquest and aggression. If the white man loses, the black man loses. Our cause is a common one under God. Let us win the war and settle our differences afterwards. Don't be a slacker because you do not like a local leader; the President is our leader and it is our duty to follow wherever he leads. Let us forget petty jealousies, race prejudice, politics or who is who, and follow the President's leadership under God. Help in need knows no color line. The President needs the prayer and full support of every American citizen, without regard to race or color.

A little old white-haired woman flew into Atlanta yesterday. Stepping blithely from an airplane at the Municipal Airport, she scanned the sky, shrugged her shoulders, and scorned efforts of airplane attendants to help her across the apron in front of the passenger waiting room.

"I don't need help, sonny," she said.

The woman was Mrs. Ella Plate, of Pownal, Vt., and points north, east, south and west. She just has turned 81, and divides her time between her children, Mrs. John C. Moore, 149 Peachtree circle, N. E., and a daughter in New York and another in Dallas, Texas.

"I have a grandson in the Philippines, and if I can get passage there, I may take off just any moment," Mrs. Plate said shortly after her arrival here.

On the ship down from New York, Mrs. Plate discovered Charles A. Sheldon IV aboard. The youngster only recently was seven months old.

"Isn't a little young to be flying?" the 81-year-old woman inquired.

Winter Worries.

Looking ahead into the present third winter of the war, the British people's chief worries are the possibility of renewed air raids, shortages of food, clothing and other rationed goods, and travel in the blackout, according to a British Institute survey published recently in the London News Chronicle.

It is interesting to note that only a tiny minority express any worry over the cost of living; in the light of other wartime problems that worry has apparently dwindled to almost nothing in Britain.

Seven Cameras, Radio Turned in by Aliens

Only seven cameras and one short wave radio receiver have been turned over to police by enemy aliens in Atlanta, Police Chief Hornsby said yesterday.

The cameras and radio were turned over to police authorities on federal orders directing all enemy aliens to surrender to police all firearms, cameras and short wave radio receivers.

Chief Hornsby said Atlanta contained only a small number of enemy aliens.

DISCOVERING A PITCHER.

Ran into Larry Miller, ace pitcher of the Atlanta Crackers for a number of seasons, Monday as he was entering the Georgia Baptist hospital for a slight operation, and Superintendent Barker told us this story about how a certain scout discovered a certain pitcher.

"I ain't left handed," replied the pitcher. "What you mean throwing that rock with your left hand?"

"Well, you see, it's like this: if I throw at squirrels with my right arm I fear 'em up so bad you can't eat 'em."

Speaking of pitchers, I was talking with Jim Bagby Sr. the other day in the barber shop, asking him what he figured the war would do to baseball.

"Oh, it will take some of the boys," replied the old Sarg., "but you'll see good baseball right on. Remember back in the last war? We had to drill every afternoon before the game, and the people actually got to coming ahead of time, just to see us drill. There'll be plenty of kids and older men to carry the game along. Baseball is a mighty good thing for the people in times of stress—gives them something to help them relax. Another thing, you'll see some fine players discovered and developed in the Army and Navy."

I was glad to hear Jim say that. I agree with him that we need baseball in times like this. It is one of the great games of all time. We probably will not have as much money to spend on baseball as usual, but we will have the game, just the same; and I imagine Jim is correct in saying that we will see some fine discoveries in the recreational program within the Army and Navy. All of which throws some light on the pathway of 1942.

'Biz,' Oddities Artist, Fitted For Uniform

Talented Constitution Sketcher Reports for Army Duty.

If you know any Georgia Oddities, they'll have to be addressed for the time being to Private "Biz" care the United States Army.

Old "Biz," the tall, bashful, lovable lad who has been drawing those Oddities for The Constitution's Sunday Magazine Section, moved in to a reception center this morning to have himself fitted for a uniform.

"Biz" is an artist, an ambitious young artist, but he has lots of the stuff that'll make a mighty fine soldier for Uncle Sam and as he shoved aside his drawing board yesterday afternoon, he remarked in that quiet tone of his: "This might really be a great opportunity." And as he moved out, Ralph McGill promised:

"There'll be a worthwhile bonus for every 'Tokyo Oddity' you send us."

"Biz" is 25 years old. He started with The Constitution in 1935 and, besides his once-a-week job on those "Georgia Oddities" he has been pushing in a full-time job as commercial artist for the Southern Engraving Company, an affiliate of The Constitution.

His name on the registry at Fort Mac this morning will be Hyman Bizinsky. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bizinsky, of 771 Washington street.

"Biz" went through Boys' High school and then studied art at the Atlanta Art Academy and at High Museum.

"I want to be a fine artist some day and I'm working right and day to develop any talent I might have," he explains, "but I'm sticking to newspaper work to insure myself three square meals a day."

He'll get those in the Army until he sends in that "Tokyo Oddity" that Doctor McGill has ordered.

FROM CRAYONS TO GUNS—"Biz," who created "Georgia Oddities" for The Constitution, shoved aside his drawing board yesterday and goes into the Army today. In private life, and on the Army records, he is Hyman Bizinsky.

West End Asks 750 Wardens For Raid Duty

Eighth Zone Director Calls for Volunteers; Leaders Named.

A call for 750 men to become air raid wardens in the West End section was issued yesterday by Major Joseph Herring, military director, and Samuel H. Wilds, civilian director of the eighth zone.

"This zone comprises the section south of Hunter street and west of Sylvan road, mainly the West End section," said Major Herring. "The immediate need is for approximately 750 men to become air raid wardens, on a purely voluntary basis."

"While the men who engage in this work will receive no monetary consideration, yet the satisfaction they will derive from the knowledge they are protecting the lives of their families, neighbors and friends, and their own property, should be ample reward for the services given."

"I strongly urge all residents of the zone to immediately register at their nearest drug store, if they desire to assist in this work."

Major Herring and Wilds also announced the following men have been named as precinct commanders: R. Morris Dobbs, John W. Ward Jr., R. L. Crawley, B. W. Moore, Young Howell, M. G. Faris, F. F. Register, J. A. Hobby and R. W. Jones.

Also announced was appointment of Horace Kerlin and A. C. Martin, principal of Joe Brown Junior High school, as staff assistants for the zone.

Linda Becomes Interested In Greg Hollister

SYNOPSIS. Linda Phillips, a humble, but attractive young stenographer in Prairieville, a small midland town has been engaged for four years to handsome, selfish Kyle Norman, who seems unable to keep a job for any length of time. At her drive home one evening she tells him that Diane Frazier, a fashion artist who has visited her and Sally Barnes, a friend of school days, to spend the week-end with her when they visit Chicago to attend the wedding of Linda's cousin, Betty Allison. This settles Kyle, he says she is more interested in the trip than in their wedding next June. Linda then admits there is something about being in Chicago. Linda and Sally have breakfast with Diane, who is a worldly, confident woman. On a last-minute shopping tour Linda meets several of Diane's friends, among them Mary Barndon, a society girl who is also engaged to a wealthy man, and Brenda Jordan, who plans to marry wealthy Jerry Coleman. As Linda and Sally get dressed for the wedding Linda becomes disconcerted because she has no evening gown to wear and announces she will not attend the ceremony. Diane thereupon offers her a beautiful dress.

INSTALLMENT VI.

"I'm Linda Phillips." How false her voice sounded to her own ears! "Chicago?" His question was polite, but Linda sensed a difference in his manner toward her. His eyes flickered suddenly in the direction of the other guests, and Linda thought, rebelliously, "He's losing interest in me because I'm dull; because I can't carry on a conversation. Why can't I be witty and vivacious like Sally, or as worldly and fascinating as Diane?" Suddenly she was talking animatedly to hold his attention. Words tumbled from her lips and Linda scarcely heard them.

"And so as a corn-fed Iowa gal, I'm at a loss to know what to say to you city slickers." She was startled, "What am I talking about?" she asked herself.

She stopped short, glancing up at her companion, and—wonder of wonders—she was smiling. The two girls were laughing together and her first fright had passed, leaving Linda completely relaxed and natural.

"I've a suggestion to offer," the handsome newcomer said. "I'd like to show the bright lights of Chicago to a little corn-fed gal."

"Oh, I'd like that very much, but—" her voice was regretful. "I believe Diane has arranged for someone to escort me to the wedding reception."

"Diane?" He gave her a swift glance, and Linda nodded. "I'm staying with her over the week-end. Diane is an old friend of mine."

"I see." He was strangely quiet, and Linda said quickly, "You know Diane Frazier, don't you? After all, she is the hostess."

"Yes, I know Diane quite well," Greg Hollister replied. He glanced casually around the smoky room and then, smiling, "I promised to stop in for a minute, but I'm afraid I've got to be running along now."

While Linda experienced a sharp stab of disappointment, the man's voice dropped to a whisper, and his bold glance made her pulses quicken, her white neck flush with scarlet.

"I'm going to see you again, Linda Phillips. Will you save a dance for me?" Linda smiled sweetly, trustingly. "Of course I will," she promised.

When he had wended his way through the crowd, pausing to say only a few words to Diane, Linda saw him turn and nod in her direction, and a radiant smile flashed across her face. She had never met anyone so boldly fascinating as Greg Hollister before. Would they—could they meet again?

After he had departed, the party seemed to lose its zest for Linda. She found herself looking forward anxiously to the wedding reception, and was relieved when the guests began to leave.

After the last visitor had gone, the three girls hastily consumed sandwiches and coffee, and then there was a hurried taxi ride across the city to the church where Betty was to be married.

The wedding was beautiful and inspiring. Watching Betty Allison, so lovely and demure in her white wedding veil, with confidence and trusting shining in her eyes as she faced her proud young bridegroom at the altar, Linda felt a lump in her throat. She wanted to laugh and cry, to sing her happiness for her cousin.

ception minus bride and bridegroom, but replete with a famous orchestra in an ornate, brightly-lighted ballroom, champagne, and the customary wedding cake, Linda's escort was a polite if slightly vague young man, but she scarcely noticed him.

Remembering Greg's prophecy that they would meet again, she admonished herself briskly. "Don't be getting foolish ideas, Miss Phillips," she scolded herself, "and over a perfect stranger, too!" Still, her heart was singing throughout the evening. Her eyes sparkled into the eyes of adoring males, as she danced every dance, and even Sally was puzzled by this remarkable change in Linda's personality.

"What has happened to you?" she whispered, puzzled. "You've looked right through me at least twice, and every time any one comes through the door you get white as a ghost."

"It—It's nothing," Linda attempted to laugh. But was it? For the first time since she had met Kyle Norman, Linda was unsure. This new attraction was so strange—so compelling—that she suddenly was ill at ease, torn between the desire to run away before it was too late, and a yearning to stay—to see Greg Hollister again.

Dancing with her escort, Linda thought, "Maybe he won't come. I was foolish to imagine anything."

"She saw, as if in a dream, a broad-shouldered young man with a shock of red hair, who tapped her partner on the shoulder and then gathered her impatiently into his arms."

"Hello, Linda Phillips," said a low, exciting voice. "I told you I'd be seeing you again."

Linda looked up, swaying dizzily as her eyes met those of the man smiling so boldly, so lazily at her.

"Greg!" So he had kept his promise. There had been something strangely fascinating between them, and he had come again! Thrilled she could only move slowly across the floor in his arms. For Linda, the evening was complete.

It was nearly 4 o'clock in the morning when Greg escorted Linda back to the apartment house and up to Diane's door.

Linda was as fresh and gay as though the evening had just begun. Only the fragrant gardenia she had worn was faded and soiled, and Linda eyed it ruefully. "That's the end of a perfect evening," "signifies the end of a perfect evening."

"You did enjoy it?" "Oh yes, Greg. I don't know when I've had such a good time."

"Then that makes me happy, too." Soberly he lifted her chin with one finger, until his eyes met hers.

"Good night, sweet little Linda," he whispered. "I'm not going to say good-bye. Fate has a strange way of playing tricks with us. Who would have guessed I'd walk into Diane's smoky, noisy apartment this afternoon and find a vision of white smiling into my eyes?"

He drew her, unprotesting, to him, tilting her face to his. "That vision was you, Linda, and I have a feeling we'll meet again—soon."

Then, simply and naturally, she was in his arms, and his lips found and claimed hers in a long, gentle kiss that caused her to sway weakly, her pulses to race.

"It's odd," she murmured thoughtfully, "but Diane prophesied today that a kiss from a handsome prince might change the entire course of my life."

"Thank you for letting me be your prince," he said. His voice was not steady. "Good night, Linda."

"Good night," she answered softly, before trembling fingers found the door-knob and the door closed between them.

'Bugs' Baer Says:

I took a gander at my tires yesterday and they look good for about another thousand miles. After that I will have to run on will power.

A lot of folks who laughed about hoss-and-bugs days are going to get a chance to buy oats again.

I dug up an old four-wheeled wagon in the barn and I'm painting it a gay color. It's an ancient Conestoga and I expect to make good time if I can get Sitting Bull to chase me.

That's all right with me. It's better to give up luxuries, to give up tires, and to give up non-essentials, than to just give up.

Greg had declared ruefully. "It's strange," Linda had replied honestly, pointing to the sparkling ring on her left hand, "how little that means to me right now."

Sally shattered Linda's reverie. "Hey, snap out of it. Diane insists on taking us to breakfast downtown, and we're waiting on you."

Linda stared ruefully at her reflection in the mirror. The familiar black hat looked almost comic now, atop her new hairdo, and Diane, seeking and understanding the reason for her distress, brought forth a tiny hat covered with soft, colorful velvet ribbons.

"Wear this," she commanded, adjusting it at the prescribed angle despite Linda's protest. "You can wear it this morning and return it before you leave for home."

That, she said truthfully, "would be unappreciated in Prairieville, even though it is a Paris model."

The morning passed almost too quickly. Breakfast consisted mainly of coffee and a review of the previous evening's activities, and then there was a frantic dash back to the apartment.

"Twenty minutes until train time," Sally wailed. "We'll never make it!" Yet, scarcely 10 minutes later they went out of the apartment and in a cab, with Diane breathless from haste, Linda and Greg were on their way.

"And to think I've scarcely seen you," she complained as the cab careened around curves and through crowded areas en route to the station.

Standing on a bottom step before the train pulled out of the station, Linda turned to her hostess. "How can I ever thank you enough for all you've done for me?"

"I had nothing to do with your success," Diane retorted spiritedly. "Whenever you tire sufficiently of Prairieville, come and visit me."

"Tire of Prairieville?" Diane nodded wisely. "You will, Linda. You were never meant to bury yourself in that snug little town; but be sure, when you do want to break away, that it isn't too late."

When the train began moving and Diane was gone, Linda stood digesting the other girl's words. What did Diane mean—"make sure it isn't too late?"

The return trip was uneventful. Linda was so absorbed in her blissful dream that time passed rapidly. If Sally was aware of any differences in the manner of her companion, she gave no sign.

Dusk was falling and lights from scattered farmhouses flickered bravely as the train rushed on. Then, with a sigh, Sally tossed her book aside and announced:

Continued Tomorrow.

Big Town Star Acts Patriotic Part Tonight

Story Tells What People Get for Money in Defense Bonds.

What the people of the United States are getting for the money they invest in defense bonds will be graphically and powerfully dramatized in the "Big Town" show starring Edward G. Robinson tonight over WGST. Timely in character is the production entitled "What You're Getting For Your Money," written by Crane Wilbur.

Steve Wilson, managing editor of the Illustrated Press in Big Town, in answering questions posed by a "small" manufacturer, who is worried about his business outlook, tells a story which emphasizes the great personal sacrifices made in behalf of our nation by men virtually forgotten by history.

The script of "What You're Getting For Your Money" has been written under a unique collaboration arrangement. Producer Wilbur wrote the first act of the show and Franklin the second.

Ona Munson will play opposite Robinson in this "Big Town" presentation. An appropriate musical setting has been devised by Leith Stevens, whose orchestra will interpret it. Ken Niles is the announcer.

Favorite Arias Of 'La Boheme' Heard Tonight

Jean Tennyson and Jan Peerce Head Cast of Brilliant Singers.

"La Boheme" by Giacomo Puccini has been chosen as the opera for "Great Moments in Music," new CBS program, presenting highlights from the world's great operas. The weekly series makes its bow tonight at 10:15 o'clock over WGST.

The operatic excerpts are to be sung by a permanent cast consisting of Jean Tennyson, internationally famed soprano; Jan Peerce, Metropolitan Opera tenor; Robert Weede, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera; and Suzanne Sten, Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano. George Sebastian is the conductor. Outstanding singers, chosen for their ability to characterize certain roles, are to make occasional guest appearances.

In no sense an attempt to present tabloid operas, "Great Moments in Music"—choosing a different opera each week—offers the main arias, concerted numbers and orchestral excerpts from each score. A narrator tells the plot of each opera, to lend background to the music and give listeners a better understanding of the work as a whole.

Miss Tennyson has scored great operatic success in the United States and abroad. Peerce, famed for his concert and radio work, recently made a universally-praised debut at the Metropolitan Opera. Weede, one of America's leading baritones, now is in his second year at the Metropolitan. Sebastian has conducted orchestras both here and in Europe.

Swing Band Singers Lanny Ross' Gues

Helen Forrest, pretty songstress who has been featured with the top-flight swing bands of the nation, is the special guest of Lanny Ross on his broadcast tonight at 7:15 o'clock over WGST.

Soloist with Benny Goodman for several seasons, Miss Forrest married and retired from professional life. But she changed her mind and returned to the microphone with Artie Shaw's band. For her appearance with Lanny, Miss Forrest has chosen for her solo, "I Got It Bad." She is also heard in a duet with Lanny, singing "As We Walk Into the Sun set."

Jewel Theft, Murder Solved on Air by 'D. A.'

It's the old story behind "The Case of the Blood Ruby" that is next up for Mr. District Attorney to solve during the broadcast tonight at 9:30 o'clock over WGST.

The case begins with the theft of a rare gem. The thieves fall out, and there is a chase around the world that ends in murder.

Jay Jostyn will be heard, as usual, in the title role, Vicki Vola as his confidential secretary, Miss Miller, and Len Doyle as his strong right arm, Harrington.

Senate Split Looms Over Selection of Farm Price 'Czar'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—(AP)—The touchy question of who should apply wartime curbs to farm prices split the senate today as it prepared to open debate tomorrow on the broad price control measure.

The senate farm bloc, under the leadership of Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, claimed 42 votes for a proposal to give the secretary of agriculture the equivalent of a veto power over any maximum price orders by the price administrator.

Senator Brown, Democrat, Michigan, floor manager for the control measure approved by the Senate Banking Committee, conceded that administration forces faced a stiff contest on the issue.

When the matter came before the committee, Brown and Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, voted against a proposal by Bankhead to give the secretary of agriculture exclusive jurisdiction over farm price ceilings. They also opposed his alternative proposal that no such ceilings be valid without the secretary's approval.

Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, usually active in the farm bloc, said he inclined toward giving responsibility to a single administrator, although he had not made up his mind on the Bankhead amendment.

Bankhead called a closed-door conference of farm-minded senators this forenoon and 27 responded. Afterward the Alabama senator said he had a minimum of 42 votes for his proposal.

Most senators said privately the issue was a reflection of a dispute between Secretary Wickard, of the Agriculture Department, supported by numerous farm organizations and legislators, and Leon Henderson, now acting as price administrator under orders of President Roosevelt.

Athens Family Learns

Son Is Safe in Hawaii

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 6.—All during the Christmas holidays the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Miller was one of sadness, for shortly before they had received notice from the Navy Department that their son, Jimmy, had been lost in action at Pearl Harbor.

But the sadness has been dispelled and happiness reigns again—due to a second telegram from the Navy Department saying its first notice was in error and that Jimmy was a survivor of the attack.

of German officers and men, had been annihilated.

The Soviet government formally accused the Germans of "unheard of pillages, general devastation, abominable violence, outrages and massacres" in Nazi-occupied Russian territory.

Formal Protest.
A note handed to all envoys accredited to Moscow by Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov said "Abundant documentary material at the disposal of the Soviet government testifies to the fact that plunder and ruin of the population . . . are widespread in all districts which fell under the heel of German Nazis."

Molotov said evidence that such activity had been directed against the noncombatant population was uncovered in towns and villages liberated by the continuing Red army offensive.

He charged further that the reported atrocities represented "a definite system devised beforehand and encouraged by the German government and German command . . . and were not excessive of isolated, undisciplined military units or individual German soldiers and officers."

"The Soviet government and its organs," he added, "keep a detailed record of all these villainous crimes of Hitler's army and for which indignant Soviet people justly demand retribution and will attain it."

Finnish 'Peace' Envoys Reported in Stockholm

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Several Finnish ministers, including Finland's former minister to Moscow, who was chief of his nation's delegation at the peace conference ending the 1939-40 winter war with Russia, have visited Stockholm in the last few weeks and some have been seen here in the last several days.

Their visits have given rise to rumors that Finland was seeking a new peace with Russia.

Considerable significance was attached to the presence here of Juhani Paasikivi, who headed the Finnish delegation to the Moscow peace conference of March, 1940, after the Soviet-Finnish winter war.

Russian circles, while not denying the possibility of peace talks, said there had been no meeting between Paasikivi and Madame Alexandra Kollantay, Soviet ambassador to Sweden.

There have been recurring rumors here that Finnish military aides several weeks ago advised their commander, Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, to refrain from further advances into Soviet territory.

A Berlin dispatch to the newspaper Dagens Nyheter said the Russians had recaptured the island of Hogland, in the Gulf of Finland, from Finnish forces which seized it two weeks ago.

The strongly fortified, 11-square mile island is in the middle of the Finnish gulf, between Finland and Estonia.

Atlanta Woman Lived Near Hickam Field During Bombing

Back Home After Evacuation, Mrs. Kushner Tells How Bombs Fired by Jap Planes Narrowly Missed Son in Bedroom.

An Atlanta woman, whose house is two blocks from Hickam Field, at Pearl Harbor, was machine-gunned by the Japanese in their first attack on the Hawaiian Islands, arrived here yesterday from Honolulu to tell of bombs "falling like eggs" about her on the fateful morning of December 7.

Mrs. Robert Lee Kushner, whose husband, a former Atlanta, is a dentist in the Army, arrived with her children, Bobby, 7, and Floyd Harold, 6 months, and her father, B. B. Fuchs, of 632 Bonaventure avenue, N. E.

Fuchs was visiting his daughter at the time of the Japanese attack and had been in Hawaii only four days. They were evacuated from Honolulu on separate boats Christmas Day and both arrived here yesterday afternoon.

The Kushners were awakened in their home by the explosion of the first bombs on an air field hangar two blocks from their home.

They thought the sound came from practice firing of cannons, Mrs. Kushner said, and started to go back to sleep when their young son, Bobby, rushed into the bedroom to tell them that the chandelier in his room had fallen on his bed.

Kushner went to investigate and found six bullet holes in the ceiling.

He then ran into the yard, saw smoke pouring from a nearby hangar, spotted the planes above, and knew the truth.

repressing these anti-German activities. His body lay in state in Paris tonight, and no announcement has been issued in either zone to indicate whether he was killed accidentally or murdered.

To meet these growing attacks, the Vichy government tonight issued a statement through the Teleradio Agency calling attention to France's declared neutrality since the United States entered the war.

The Paris politicians were accused of trying to disrupt "national unity in France" and the statement pointed out that the Paris press, over which Vichy has no control, "has not missed an occasion to criticize the attitude of the French government when it thought it saw signs of a less exclusively European attitude" on Vichy's part.

Informed quarters in London saw the possibility of a break between Berlin and Vichy which would compel the Germans to replace Marshal Petain's group with a full collaboration puppet government.

New outbreaks of violence against the Germans, they said, are likely to hasten a showdown.

Despite constant British suspicion of any sign indicating that Petain is opposing the Germans, press dispatches from London correspondents on the continent are beginning to display a friendly attitude toward Vichy.

One correspondent said "Hitler's Mediterranean plans were frustrated by Vichy's inexcusable refusal to join the Axis."

able terrain between Kuantan and Singapore this seizure was of little consequence save for the air arm.

Malayan Invasion.
On the western side of the peninsula the invader had thrust into Selangor state in an area some 240 miles north of Singapore, the British having been forced to fall back because of a threat to their left flank. This placed the Japanese in the vicinity of Kuala Selangor, whence roads run eastward and southward to Kuala Lumpur, Malaya's second largest city; and then on down to Singapore itself.

While both these Japanese penetrations were serious, however, late word last night from Singapore was that subsequent local British offensives still were in progress "with most satisfactory results" and that in these actions the enemy's firing power is inferior to that of the British.

In action far above the Singapore theater, but intimately connected with it prospectively, the Chinese went on consolidating a great victory against the Japanese in Hunan province.

The invader, said a Chinese spokesman in describing the third disaster to befall Japanese arms before the Hunan capital of Changsha, had lost 37,000 casualties and was about to lose 40,000 more men in a Chinese trap that already had closed between the Laotian and Liuyang rivers.

77,000 Casualties Loom.
Thus, it was added, 77 per cent of the initial Japanese assault force of 100,000 was destroyed or in great peril.

The day brought a disclosure that the headquarters of the supreme commander of the united nations in the southwest Pacific, the British General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, would be established in the Dutch East Indies.

This was warmly greeted by the Dutch, who, for some time, had been emphasizing the vital positions of their islands, and appeared to have somewhat mollified the slight but perceptible disappointment that had been exhibited in some Indies quarters that no Dutch figure is in the top Allied command as presently constituted.

The principal claim of the Japanese was that 10 planes and 148 trucks had been destroyed on Luzon by their bombing since Friday.

By reporting that an American fighter plane had been shot down in attacking a Japanese position, Tokyo obliquely acknowledged that American craft still were in the air in the Philippine theater.

Florida Bus System Bid Filed by Atlantan
Plans for the purchase of the municipal bus system operated by the city of Daytona Beach, Fla., by J. C. Steinmetz, president of the Suburban Coach Company of Atlanta, were revealed yesterday by the Daytona Beach News-Journal.

Steinmetz, from his office here, yesterday confirmed that he had made an offer on the bus line, but stated that the transaction is still a long way from being consummated, as it is necessary for Daytona Beach citizens to vote on his proposition.

At the same time, the board ordered all dairies in Atlanta to make deliveries between 7 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the evening. The dairymen were ordered to deliver the milk to homes, take up the bottles and make collections on the one trip. Three trips formerly were required.

The board announced it was going to enforce a law which requires all consumers, both wholesale and private, to either furnish a bottle with each purchase of milk or to put up a deposit of 3 cents on the bottle. This action was taken at the request of dairymen who complained that "stealing of bottles has increased greatly in recent weeks."

Storm Troops' Power Slump Seen by Swiss

Brown-Shirted Ranks Expected To Cease Functioning.

BERN, Switzerland, Jan. 6.—(AP) Reliable information arriving from Germany indicated today that Adolf Hitler's brown-shirted storm troopers no longer play an important role in the Nazi party and may soon cease to function altogether.

The organization, called the St. A. (Sturm Abteilung) has always borne the brunt of the party's heavy work since early days. It was said to be slipping since shortly after the beginning of the campaign against Russia.

The first indication came when the organization's newspaper, Die S. A., ceased publication in August with no official explanation. Members who inquired were told simply that the action was taken because of a paper shortage.

Next came an order calling a large percentage of S. A. men to the colors in the regular army instead of assigning them storm troopers' duties as in previous campaigns. They now wear army uniforms and are mixed in the same units with ordinary soldiers.

The most recent move was the secret order forbidding S. A. men to hold meetings. No explanation was given.

A neutral observer, however, who has just come from Berlin, said the real reason was the fact that some of the storm troop meetings had turned into forums for criticizing the conduct of the Russian campaign.

The S. A. the backbone of Nazi party organization since the party's birth, formed a party militia which aided Hitler's rise to power. Captain Ernst Roehm, chief of the storm troopers, was executed in the Nazi blood purge June 30, 1934.

RAF Raid Blasts Sicilian Airdrome

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 7.—(AP)—The Air Ministry announced today that Sunday night's RAF raid on the Castelvetrano airdrome in western Sicily was a "devastating" eight-hour assault which burned "a large number of German troop-carrying planes and wrought chaos among the forces seeking to bolster the Nazi African corps of General Erwin Rommel."

"Junkers troop carriers and bombers were hit on the ground and the RAF pilots then swooped low to machinegun Nazi soldiers ready to fly to Tripoli," it said.

"Part of the runway was blown up and columns of black smoke rising to 1,000 feet from burning aircraft and petrol tanks could be seen by our pilots 40 miles away."

All the British planes returned safely.

Atlantan's Plan Would Provide Red Cross Aid

Circulation of 'Victory Dollars' Suggested by Manley.

Circulation of "victory dollars," which will accumulate defense savings stamps for the Red Cross as it goes about its journey, was advocated by Robert H. Manley Jr., former Atlanta attorney, now attached to the quartermaster's depot in Charlotte, N. C.

In a letter to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Manley suggested that a piece of cloth, the same size of a dollar bill, be attached to dollar bills, and that the bills be placed in circulation.

On the back of the cloth, Manley said, could be printed such slogans as "To Stamp Out Distress," or "Take Your Change in Defense Stamps," or "Stamp Out the Axis."

As the dollar bill goes from hand to hand, defense stamps are to be attached, and when the cloth is filled with stamps, it shall then be detached by a bank, and the cloth full of defense stamps sent to the nearest Red Cross office and another dollar bill placed into circulation.

Birthdays Give No Excuse For Weight

By Ida Jean Kain.

Normal weight is fundamental to health. If you are too fat or too thin, you are not in your best form. But normal weight for you is strictly an individual matter. It depends on your bones.

Some people are tall with small bones, others tall with large bones; and some are short with small bones, others with big bones. Come to think of it, you realize that people may be the same height, but with different bony structures they couldn't weigh the same. The ideal weight for the short person with a heavy frame might approximate that of the tall person with the slight frame.

For the sake of accuracy, the weight charts should list four sets of averages: one for the slight frame, a second for the medium, a third for the large, and still another set for the people with the exceptionally heavy frames. Even then there should be a zone within which weight is considered normal rather than any specific number of pounds. Perfect weight for you is that at which you feel best, have most endurance and can do your best work. This will also be the weight at which you look best.

Where do birthdays come in? They don't. Because most people do take on weight as they get along, the "standard" charts allow for an increase. But your normal weight at 30 is your best weight from then on. Some medical authorities believe that after 40 it is best to lighten the load and be slightly under normal weight for your structure.

In calculating your normal weight, allow a basic 100 pounds for five feet of height for a slight frame; 105 for five feet for a medium frame; and 110 pounds for a stocky frame. Then for each inch over five feet, add five pounds. This works in reverse, too. Subtract five pounds for each missing inch if you are under five feet tall.

Check your weight against the following table:

Height	Slight Frame	Medium Frame	Large Frame
5 ft.	100 lbs.	105 lbs.	110 lbs.
5 ft. 1 in.	101 lbs.	106 lbs.	111 lbs.
5 ft. 2 in.	102 lbs.	107 lbs.	112 lbs.
5 ft. 3 in.	103 lbs.	108 lbs.	113 lbs.
5 ft. 4 in.	104 lbs.	109 lbs.	114 lbs.
5 ft. 5 in.	105 lbs.	110 lbs.	115 lbs.
5 ft. 6 in.	106 lbs.	111 lbs.	116 lbs.
5 ft. 7 in.	107 lbs.	112 lbs.	117 lbs.
5 ft. 8 in.	108 lbs.	113 lbs.	118 lbs.
5 ft. 9 in.	109 lbs.	114 lbs.	119 lbs.
5 ft. 10 in.	110 lbs.	115 lbs.	120 lbs.
5 ft. 11 in.	111 lbs.	116 lbs.	121 lbs.

U. S. Box Office Revives After First War Slump

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 5.—Theater business bounced back so robustly over the holidays, according to reports just checked in Hollywood, that studios have abandoned an original intention to sharply curtail film budgets.

For ten days after the United States declared war, box office grosses throughout the nation hit a startling new low—15 per cent or normal business! Attendance has now crept up around the 100 per cent mark—good indication that wartime will be a period when the fans will be thankful for the relief and relaxation afforded by a few hours' visit to the movie house.

Six biggest current hits, from a paid attendance standpoint, are: "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Ball of Fire," "Remember the Day," "Dumbo," and "Keep 'Em Flying." Five are out-and-out comedies bordering on the slapstick, a significant tip-off on what the ratio of comedy to drama will be during 1942.

Eighty-eight war titles ranging alphabetically from "Alaska Alert" to "Youth on the March" have received "Protective" registration at the Hays office, but you can wager that only a handful of these subjects will reach the screen—at least until such a time as Hollywood can get a good feel of the public's pulse.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are better friends off the screen than they appear to be on it. Between them has raged the longest two-handed marathon poker tournament in amusement history. The boys began playing poker when they first joined up in burlesque several years ago—and the stakes were mere buttons. Today, whenever there's a new camera set up for "Rio Rita," Bud and Lou hike to the dressing room and resume the seven-year feud. The ante is now a little higher, as befits their new station in life, and $100 "I. O. U.'s" are frequently exchanged after a half hour's pause between scenes.

With Author John Steinbeck's approval and in line with an unwritten Hollywood law for 1942, a happy ending has been written into the film version of "Tortilla Flat." Five sugary finales were submitted to the author before he okayed one. . . . John Garfield's description of Hollywood: "The place where people spend money they haven't earned yet, to buy things they don't need, to impress people they don't like." . . . Re-member Elisha Cook Jr., that crazy young killer who scared the wits out of everyone but Humphrey Bogart in "The Maltese Falcon"? He goes completely scientific trying to snuff out Judy Canova in "Sleeping Gal." Cook attempts to do away with Judy by (1) Freezing her to death in a refrigerator, (2) pumping an anesthetic up a microphone as she sings into it, (3) wrapping her in a sleeping blanket and roasting her to death. Joe Santley, now directing "Yokel Boy," used to cry after each camera take: "It's as good as gold." Now he's changed the line to "It's as good as a defense bond." . . . Al Jolson's musical show, "Hold on to Your Hats," will come to the screen, but it's questionable whether Jolson will be the star. Universal is striving desperately to land the piece for Abbott and Costello.

MGM has turned the cold shoulder to further loanouts of Spencer Tracy, wanted by both David Selznick for the priest in "Keys of the Kingdom" and Warner Brothers for the Will Rogers life story. Selznick has been receiving hundreds of letters from fans and exhibitors urging him to get Tracy and no other for the Cronin hero, Robert Donat. Laurence Olivier and Leslie Howard have been considered, but all are in England and not disposed to leave there at this time. . . . No marriage clauses in player contracts don't mean a thing, at least they don't at 20th Century-Fox. During 1941, Alice Faye, Brenda Joyce, Nancy Kelly, Gene Tierney, Cobina Wright Jr., and Arleen Whelan all wed—in direct contrast to contract stipulations. . . . Three weeks ago Clark Gable, 38,000-a-week star, was slated to start a new picture, "Somewhere I'll Find You." After censorship clashes over Garbo's "Two-Faced Woman," the script was rushed back for purging rewrites. The project has apparently developed into one of major proportions because Gable is still idle—and the box office needs him badly at this time.

Hair that gleams with highlights and that is easily manageable makes any woman more glamorous. Rita Johnson's interesting coiffure is even more attractive because of the healthy beauty of her hair.

New Rinse Gives Hair a Natural Sheen

By Winifred Ware.

Ask a man what he notices first about a girl and chances are he will reply "her hair." Gleaming, healthy hair that is neatly arranged is a beauty asset to make any girl outstanding, and here's a trick which will produce it in a jiffy for most of us.

Although hair that is really unhealthy takes prolonged and specialized treatment to return to normal the average head of hair can be converted from just ordinary to outstanding in one simple step.

Add two tablespoons from a bottle of a certain clear liquid to your last rinse water when you wash your hair. Don't rinse this out, but use it to set your hair. You'll notice that your hair is easier to manage and that your wave goes in more readily.

Then when your hair has been dried (preferably without artificial heat) you will comb it out to find it gleaming and sparkling, full of dancing lights and withal, more manageable, more willing to stay in place than usual.

This is not a bleach or coloring rinse, but seems to add life and beauty to the natural color of your hair. Just how it accomplishes this I do not know except that it is in no way harmful to the hair.

A dollar bottle of this rinse will last for 10 or more shampoos and once you have used it I doubt that you'll be without it again.

If you call Winifred Ware at 6565, I can tell you where you can buy the rinse . . . or if you prefer you can write in care of The Constitution, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cheese Boasts Nutrition Plus Thrift

By Sally Saver.

Cheese is one of our most nutritious and versatile foods. Every housekeeper should consider cheeses, particularly those made from whole milk, as food staples, and should use them widely in economical meal planning. Au gratin and escalloped dishes are rich in essential food elements because they contain milk, and one of the milk products, cheese. These dishes are deservedly popular in cold weather, too, because they come up piping hot, and have a rib-sticking quality much appreciated when appetites are whetted by wintry winds. Vegetables au gratin are particularly nutritious, and here is one you'll no doubt serve very soon:

Cauliflower and Asparagus Au Gratin.
1 medium cauliflower
1 No. 1 can asparagus tips
2 cups medium white sauce
1 1-2 cups grated American cheese
1-4 cup bread crumbs

Break cauliflower into flowerets and cook in boiling salted water until barely tender. Drain. Add grated cheese to white sauce and heat until well blended. Place cooked cauliflower in buttered casserole, surround with asparagus and cover with the sauce. Sprinkle top with buttered crumbs and bake in moderate oven 20 or 30 minutes, or until thoroughly hot and crumbs are brown. Serves six.

Medium White Sauce.
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1-3 teaspoon salt
1-6 teaspoon paprika

Melt butter, add flour and stir until blended. Add milk gradually and stir constantly over low fire until sauce boils. Add seasonings and simmer five minutes. Questions about foods, recipes, cooking and serving will be answered by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution or WA. 6565.

Cauliflower and asparagus au gratin is a dish rich in important nutrients.

Independence Cures In-law Trouble

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I am having mother-in-law trouble and I am not even married. The mother of the boy I am engaged to has already started giving us advice and has already started telling me how to run my home, and how to treat my husband. She tells me of my future husband's likes and dislikes and how I can manage him. She has told me that she had a hard time with his father when she first married him, and that her son is of the same nature, so I will have to be careful and handle him with gloves on. The outlook for my life doesn't look very bright and I am just wondering what is the best thing to do. What would you suggest?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

You will have to put a stop to this or you will end up by having some other woman run your home. There is no necessity for making a scene or being rude to your future mother-in-law. Your easiest course will be to listen to her without committing yourself and then do as you please. This may seem hard to do now but it will avoid difficulty later.

You will find that your relations with your in-laws will be most pleasant if they learn to respect your independence.

DEVELOP A HOBBY TO HELP FORGET BOY

Dear Dixie: I am a young girl and love a boy who is a few years my senior. I have loved him all my life. We went to school together, but I have never dated him. He is very popular and goes with all the girls, although he is considered rather mean. He goes with the girls who have the wildest reputation. I love him more than any boy or girl I know, but on the other hand I want to get him off my mind. I do not want to love him, but I cannot help it. Our folks visit very often. I have pretended to be angry with him, but he gets me so that I cannot be angry with him. I have tried to make him angry, but it does no good. I go with other boys, but he is on my mind all the time. How can I get him off my mind and not love him?

FOURTEEN. Get your mind on something which has nothing to do with this boy. If you have a hobby, develop it. If there is anything you enjoy doing, card playing, walking, knitting, dancing, anything which you like, then center your interests upon it and try to make yourself proficient. There should be a number of things which could occupy your mind, and time, so that you will not be worrying about this boy. One way you can forget him, is to tell yourself that you will not think of him, and have strength of character enough not to let him occupy your mind. If you refuse to let yourself think of some unpleasant subject, then you can certainly keep from thinking of him. I do not see how you can possibly love someone whom you have never had a date with, and seem to know as casually as you know this boy. The fact that he does not seem interested in you, should be reason enough to make you forget him.

ABOUT SERVING COFFEE

Dear Dixie: When a servant serves coffee, should she serve from the left or the right side? And what about the cream and sugar, how should it be passed?

WORRIED GUEST. The coffee should be placed on the table from the right side when served by a servant. When the sugar and cream is passed by the servant it is passed to the left of the guest, just as other dishes of the menu. If more informal, the sugar and cream is passed from guests to guest around the table.

PROPER FORM FOR INTRODUCTION

Dear Dixie: Is a man presented to a woman in an introduction or vice versa? J. H. The man is always presented to the woman.

Mother, This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Wonderful

Saves Real Money. No Cooking. Quick Results. To get the most surprising relief from coughs due to colds, you can easily prepare a medicine, right in your own kitchen. It's very easy—a child could do it—needs no cooking, and tastes so good that children take it willingly. But you'll say it beats them all for quick results. First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any drugist, and pour it into a pint bottle. Then add your syrup.

This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough syrup—about nine times as much for your money. It never spoils, and lasts a family a long time. And for real, quick relief, it can't be beaten. It acts in three ways—loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

'Remember Hickam Field!' Is the War Cry in Hawaii

By SALLY FORTH.

THE NATION'S MOTTO is "Remember Pearl Harbor," but in Hawaii one hears more often the battle cry, "Remember Hickam Field!" First-hand information concerning the effect of Japan's assault on the Paradise of the Pacific comes from Mrs. John S. Gibson, who arrived here yesterday from Honolulu to visit her sister, Mrs. Mark C. Pope Jr., on Peachtree Battle avenue.

Mrs. Gibson is the wife of Lieutenant Colonel John S. Gibson, of the United States Army Medical Corps stationed at Schofield Barracks, formerly at Fort Benning. She was accompanied to Atlanta by her daughters, Eleanor, who is 14, and Patsy, who is 9. Since Lieutenant Colonel Gibson will remain in the Hawaiian Islands for the duration of the war, she is seriously considering making Atlanta her future home.

At the time of the attack, Mrs. Gibson, her husband, and their children were in their quarters at Schofield Barracks, which is about 20 miles from Pearl Harbor and 15 miles from Hickam Field. She first realized that the islands were being attacked when several Japanese planes flew over their home and began dropping bombs. According to Mrs. Gibson, members of her family seated themselves quietly in the center of the living room away from windows, where they remained until the bombers moved away to more important military objectives about an hour later. The raiders machine-gunned the quarters and dropped bombs, but there were no casualties at that spot, which was due perhaps to the exceptionally long caves on the houses. Mrs. Gibson and her family heard the crescendo of bombs striking near-by Wheeler Field and Hickam Field, where officers and pilots were machine-gunned as they ran from the barracks to the pursing planes. A great many of the casualties at Hickam Field, she says, occurred when the treacherous Japs bombed the mess hall where a large number of pilots were having breakfast.

Hawaii, according to Mrs. Gibson, was very proud of Hickam Field. It was beautiful and it was new. She believes, like many other residents of the naval stronghold, that the enemy received information from spies which led to the perfect timing of the assault.

Once in the air, American pilots did a splendid job, and the visitors heard of no plane shot down in action. She believes that the damage to planes and pilots occurred before the defenders took off in pursuit of the enemy. On the evening of December 7 Mrs. Gibson and her daughters were evacuated from the danger zone during an emergency blackout. They were conducted through battered Pearl Harbor, and saw two vessels still in flames. They spent the night in a schoolhouse in the hills, where the American Red Cross had established a home defense unit, and later returned to their home to pack for preparation for their evacuation to San Francisco.

The crossing was quiet, according to Mrs. Gibson. Passengers were required to wear their lifebelts at all times, and arrived safely on the west coast on New Year's Eve!

The visitor expresses the conviction that Hawaii is now ready to handle anything that comes!

WHEN an airplane makes a happy landing

Constitution Staff Photo—Marion Johnson. Mrs. Edwin McCarty, president of the Atlanta Junior League, at the left, presents a silver vegetable service to Mrs. Isoline Campbell McKenna, founder of the Atlanta League. The service is a gift from the past presidents of the organization, the presentation having been made at the formal celebration of the league's silver anniversary held yesterday.

Junior League Presents Gift To Mrs. McKenna, Its Founder

The formal celebration of the Atlanta Junior League's silver anniversary, which took place at the Piedmont Driving Club yesterday, was highlighted by the presence of the founder, Mrs. Isoline Campbell McKenna, and 19 of the 22 presidents who served the League during the past 25 years.

In a special ceremony, honoring the founder, the past presidents presented Mrs. McKenna a silver vegetable service. Mrs. Edwin McCarty, president, in making the presentation, reviewed the historic meeting, held on October 2, 1916, at which the League was organized with a charter membership of 45 members of the Debutante Clubs of 1914, 1915 and 1916.

Mrs. Russell Bellman, defense chairman, presented an outline of the opportunities for service open to League members and the responsibilities they were expected to assume in the present emergency. A registration of members present was conducted at the meeting. Mrs. Bellman also reported that 227 stockings were filled at Christmas for patients at Lawson hospital and that two ping pong tables had been presented for the recreation center. Mrs. Bellman requested members who would entertain cadets for the Naval Air Base at Sunday dinner and on other occasions to get in touch with her.

Mrs. Green Warren, director of the C. D. V. O., was paid high tribute for the outstanding service she has rendered in organizing and operating the C. D. V. O. Mrs. Claude McGinnis, who will serve as tour sergeant of a Junior League unit of 35 members to maintain a service of charting movements of planes in this area, announced the personnel of the Junior League unit to serve in this capacity.

The League voted a contribution of $250 to the Red Cross emergency war fund. Mrs. Francis M. Bird, placement chairman, announced that increased demands for service necessitated a strengthening of all forms of community service and announced that a joint meeting of all chapters of welfare, hospital, and other home defense service committees, and volunteer supervisors in the hospitals and welfare agencies would be held January 8 for the purpose of re-evaluating all volunteer jobs and handling in a more effective way all essential community services.

Mrs. Everard Richardson Jr., speech school chairman, told of the Christmas party for the children at the speech school which was arranged by Mrs. F. M. Atkins and Mrs. Hugh Nunnally. Mrs. Frank Harold will be in charge of Junior League volunteers at the school.

The League voted to continue the Children's Theater program and it was announced that casting for the play, "Titan," would take place the second week of January, at Candler Field on Friday, it will be met with unusual interest by Lieutenant Dwight K. Smith, U. S. A. C., because his fiancée, Wanda Nutt, will disembark. She will fly to Atlanta from San Angelo, Texas, to become the bride of Lieutenant Smith on Saturday afternoon.

The ceremony takes place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight K. Smith, parents of the groom-elect, at 1223 Cumberland road. When Lieutenant Smith received his primary training at Brady Tech in San Angelo, he became acquainted with his fiancée, and their romance began to flourish. He belongs to the 3rd Observation Squadron and will have as his best man, Lieutenant Hugh Bowden, a brother officer in the United States Air Corps. Wanda will have Betsy Lee as her only attendant.

The bride-elect was educated at San Angelo school, and is the daughter of Hollis Nutt. She is an attractive and beautiful brunette, who possesses an engaging personality and has lots of charm. After their marriage, the young couple will reside with Lieutenant Smith's parents on Cumberland road.

Georgia Beats Clemson, 39-31, For First Victory of Season

Roland Leads Bulldog Five With 14 Points

Lampe's Quintet Leads Carolina Tigers at Half-Time, 23-15.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 6.—(AP)—A bigger, more powerful Georgia basketball team was hard put tonight in squeezing out a 39 to 31 win over an aggressive Clemson College five.

The game was closer than the score indicated. In the last half Coach "Rock" Norman, of Clemson, threw several comparatively small men into the game and their speed forced the Bulldogs onto the defensive. At one time the South Carolinians were within four points of tying the game, but Coach Elmer Lampe's crew was just a bit too strong.

The win tonight gave Georgia a record of one lost and one won to date. They lost last night to the University of South Carolina.

Pacing the Georgia attack was Buddy Roland, a forward, who scored 14 points.

Score at the half was Georgia 23, Clemson 15.

Double Offside Banned By Grid Rules Makers

Syracuse's Y Formation Is Abolished; Sleeper Play Under Screen of Subs Goes Out.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Pursuing a general hands-off policy in regard to new statutes, the National Collegiate Football Rules Committee moved to take a few kinks out of the rules and adjourned its annual meeting tonight.

There were no new rules written into the book, but several were clarified as the group wound up a three-day session at Camelback Inn.

Chief of these were:

The double offside penalty was virtually abolished. A supplemental note in the existing rules was written, insisting that a referee instead of ruling that both had been offside and ordering the play repeated.

Another note described as unsportsmanlike the hideout or sleeper play executed under a screen of multiple substitutions. It was explained that there had been instances where three substitutes came into a game, four started off the field and one stopped to occupy an obscure position on the sideline. Often his presence was shielded by persons on the sideline. A 15-yard penalty was prescribed for this illegal maneuver.

The end was written for the "Y" formation, used by Syracuse last season and featuring the center snapping the ball with his back to his opponents. A clause said a player to be legally on the line of scrimmage must face his opponents in line.

Should not be played by players turning their backs to their opponents," said A. A. Stagg, lifetime member of the committee.

In clarifying the unlimited substitution rule, particularly in the last two minutes of each half, the committee ruled that after the ball has been made ready to be put into play by the referee, no substitute can be put in without a penalty.

Other members of the Colquitt Board of Commissioners, said today the county was starting toward cash basis operations again after having lopped $48,091.70 from its indebtedness in 1941.

He reported that as of January 1, 1942, the county owed $146,625.80, adding that as of January 1, 1942, the indebtedness had been reduced to $98,534.10.

Outstanding warrants, for eight years the most difficult item to handle, were slashed to $38,863.52 during the past year and now stand at $54,725.08, he said.

King reported also that road construction valued at $89,200.56 had been done in Colquitt county during the past year.

"At the present rate of reduction Colquitt county should be debt free in two more years," King said. The county two years ago began a broad retrenchment program designed to place it on a strictly cash basis.

Carl H. Wolfe, the new president of the Chamber of Commerce, and President Roosevelt were the principal speakers at the Civitan Club's weekly luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic Club yesterday.

"We hope that this year in the Chamber of Commerce we will have time from defense work to make an intensive industrial production and market survey with the idea of laying the basis for co-ordinating industrial expansion in Atlanta and surrounding territory," he concluded.

The Chamber of Commerce president spoke only 10 minutes and the members devoted the remainder of their luncheon program to the radio address of President Roosevelt.

Big Building Record Seen in Valdosta Area

More Than $5,000,000 Spent in and Near City, Report Shows.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 6.—In these days of 1942 Valdosta has had an opportunity to look back over some of the major accomplishments and evidence of growth during the year 1941. In the building records of the city of Valdosta, it is shown that construction operations for the past year reached a total of more than $5,000,000.

This record of building investments covers only activities within the city limits. Within a radius of 10 miles of the city, building investments for the year reached a total of more than $5,000,000.

The city of Valdosta last year planned a municipal improvement—expansion of water and sewerage system—to exceed $1,250,000. The application of the city for government allotments to assist in this improvement has been approved in Washington, and it is expected that the project will be under way early this year.

The city of Valdosta has also made application to the government for more than $1,000,000 for the improvement of the municipal airport, and this has been approved and is on the schedule for 1942 construction.

While the city looks forward to the completion of its ambitious program for 1942, Lowndes county will also make some forward progress with undoubtedly the largest crop cultivation in its history.

The United States Department of Agriculture has promulgated its farm program for the year and Joe Bilderback, in charge of farm extension work for the department, has made a survey and finds that 85 per cent of the farmers have agreed to give the department full co-operation.

The end was written for the "Y" formation, used by Syracuse last season and featuring the center snapping the ball with his back to his opponents. A clause said a player to be legally on the line of scrimmage must face his opponents in line.

New Job 'Malady' Hits Stenographers, But It's Patriotic

By HAROLD MARTIN.

That strange malady which has afflicted pretty young Atlanta stenographers during recent weeks is not, as some puzzled office managers have feared, a new occupational disease.

It is artistry—make-believe of the finest sort, play-acting that would make the languid heroines of the screen lift an envious eyebrow.

And if the kind-hearted office managers aforesaid, who let Nellie go home, poor child, because she looked as if she were about to swoon over the typewriter, were to look out the window they would see Nellie, her glorious health miraculously restored, skedaddling to the nearest typewriter renting agency.

Pay $120 a Month.

There she would put down two one-dollar bills, and from there would trip rapidly over to room 101M New Post Office building, where, along with some 50-odd others, she would for the period of a long afternoon take dictation and copy sundry documents with great facility.

The point is, the government needs stenographers in Washington and the pay is $120 a month for those who can pass the test. However, a little research reveals that Nellie's guile is not confined to borrowing an afternoon from her regular employment to try out as a government stenographer. She also will toss Uncle Sam a curve ball if the opportunity offers itself.

She does not mind going to Washington to work. But she had rather stay at home. And taking the test for the Washington jobs will make her more confident when the Civil Service people start testing for jobs in the Atlanta area.

Young, Old Apply.

It must not be supposed, of course, that all who take the Civil Service tests arrive there by the subterfuge noted above. Many are youngsters just out of business school. Some are older folks, up to 53, who have long since retired from the stenographic business and are just now coming back in because the country needs stenographers so badly.

Some aren't afraid to ask their boss for the afternoon off so they can take the test, their bosses being people who are glad to see a girl get a better job. She can take the head of one department over at the state capital, for instance. His secretary wanted to take the test and he not only said "ok," he offered to carry over her regular typewriter, so she could have the advantage of using a machine she was accustomed to.

There are some, though, who do not feel patriotic enough to give up a good stenog to the service of the country, no matter how badly Uncle Sam needs gals—and boys—for the matter—who can make a typewriter clatter like a machinegun.

Typists Needed Badly.

How badly Uncle Sam needs typists clearly is seen in one brief visit to the headquarters of the Civil Service Commission of the fifth district here. The tests are held in the afternoon. The papers are graded that night. The applicant is informed the next day whether she passed or not and just as soon as she gets her physical test, and fills out a few questions about age and experience and so on, she finds herself on her way to the bedlam of the national capital.

She doesn't have time to go sightseeing when she gets there, either. She reports to the central office of the Civil Service Commission, gets her assignment to the particular bureau where she will work, and before she has got the travel-kinks out of her legs she's busy.

There's one brief pause. Before she starts to work the head of her office sits her down and talks to her very solemnly. He tells her that she may find out the course of her job, things that enemy agents would give a great deal to know. She is told that she must keep these secrets from everybody. From the girls she lives with. From her boy-friend. From her folks at home. When that's understood, she goes to work.

Room Accommodations.

She's not just sitting in, willy-nilly, of course, and left to fend for herself when quitting time comes. One of the first bits of information she gets is the location of the defense house registry, where she can find nice rooms listed within 30 to 45 minutes' ride from her work, at prices ranging from $20 to $30 a month for single rooms, $30 to $40 for doubles, and rooms with board from $40 to $50. Which is not too bad, on a salary of $1,440 a year. That's just the junior stenographer pay scale, of course. Promotion to senior stenographer, at $1,620 a year, is generally rapid, and "the chance for later advancement are excellent" the government says.

Since the government discovered that it takes not only ships and guns but stenographers to win a war, the civil service, which once moved with fairly stately pace, has been a whirlwind.

On December 21, which was a Sunday, Edgar W. Wilson, senior administrative assistant who has worked nights and Sundays and weekdays, too, since the war started, got a wire from Washington saying they had to have 70 stenographers from the Atlanta area by December 29.

Others Still Needed.

In 10 minutes the radio stations were sending out the call. The next morning the papers carried the word. The business schools and the commercial high schools and the state employment service was notified. On Monday night 80 persons showed up for the test and by midnight 35 had been notified they had passed the 96-word-a-minute dictation test and had copied neatly and accurately the number of lines they were supposed to copy in a 10-minute period. By December 29 the government had its 70 stenographers and the 600 others it had called for from other districts.

Others are still needed. And anybody, from 16 to 53, white or Negro, male or female, whose health is pretty good and whose eyesight is all right, can stand the tests. In fact there's another test coming up Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at room 101-M New Post Office. Just bring your typewriter and come along.

at the COURTHOUSE

Fulton county commissioners will hold their 1942 reorganization meeting at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the courthouse. It was reported Troy Chastain will remain as chairman, with other members retaining the same committee chairmanships as in 1941.

Fulton county grand jury, organized Monday by Judge E. E. Pomeroy, yesterday considered routine work clearing up matters left over by the last grand jury during its probe of state affairs. Eleven true bills charging small burglaries and robberies were returned.

Russell Sowers, white youth, yesterday was convicted of robbery by a jury in Fulton superior court and was sentenced to serve from six to 10 years. He was charged with robbing Mrs. Dora Norton of $510 December 11. Sowers said he had no idea what made him grab Mrs. Norton's money at a lunchstand where she was working.

SCHOOLS REOPEN.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 6.—School days started yesterday for pupils in Athens and Clarke county schools, with a full schedule of lessons after an extended Christmas holiday. The children were released for Christmas on December 19.

Experts To Put Idle Machine Tools To Work

Union Leader and Army Officer on Tour of Factories.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—(P)—The War Department sent Walter P. Reuther, CIO Automobile Union leader, and an Army officer on a tour of armaments plants today to see where idle automobile machine tools may be put to use with best advantage.

Reuther won attention a year ago by insisting that unused machine tools in automobile factories could be utilized to turn out 300 warplanes a day. Accompanying him on the tour is Lieutenant Colonel A. Robert Giesburg, of the office of Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war. Among other places they will visit are the Mack Truck Company's plant at New Brunswick, N. J.; the Empire Ordnance plant at Philadelphia; American Car & Foundry at Berwyn, Pa.; and the Oldsmobile and A. C. Sparkplug factories at Detroit.

Reuther is a member of the new Labor-Management Committee charged with the task of changing the automobile industry from peacetime production to wartime output. Meantime, representatives of 44,000 retail automobile dealers flocked to Washington to find out what their future is under the government orders freezing the sale of cars and trucks pending the establishment of a rationing system.

Saying that the dealers are confronted with ruin, the National Automobile Dealers' Association proposed, among other things, that the government shall permit the delivery of all bona fide orders dated prior to January 1, 1942.

At the City Hall

Tom Clift, business manager of city school department, who has been in Washington on business, returned to his desk yesterday.

Collection of city taxes by the board of tax assessors has been the highest in many years, J. C. Little, member of the board, said yesterday.

Instrumental music teachers of the city school system yesterday met with Miss Anne Grace O'Callaghan, city high school music supervisor, to map plans for spring musical events.

Mayor McCraw yesterday was busy signing council-approved routine business licenses, passed at the meeting Monday. He said he had not considered all papers adopted and did not know whether he would veto any or not.
